

Omni-House prevents youths from reaching end of road

by JILL BETTNER

The 15-year-old kid is nervous. He slouches further down in the chair and recrosses his long, bluejeaned legs. Brushing his hair out of his eyes with a shaking hand, he blurts out his story.

"Look man, I didn't do nothin'. I mean that teacher just doesn't like me, so she kicked me out. Hey, you know my old man wouldn't understand that, so I had to split — I had to."

It's a familiar alibi, one Harry Wells, Omni-House counselor, has heard from lots of other runaways. Lots of other kids like this youth who doesn't really understand why they leave home, why life is unbearable there.

Some minor scrape a kid gets into can trigger the impulse to run, Wells said, but usually it's just a manifestation of trouble that's been brewing for a long time.

The suburban lifestyle contributes to a situation Wells said is difficult for many adolescents to handle.

A COMMUTING father who catches the 6 a.m. train to the city not to return until late evening often leaves behind a nonworking wife. Lonely, with too much time on her hands, Wells said she turns to her children for attention she can't get from her absent husband.

Without realizing it, he said, she becomes a "smother mother," quenching with well-meaning affection the natural teen-age desire for freedom and independence until she literally drives her child to make a break for it.

"This is the kind of mother who very often says, 'My whole life is my children,'" Wells explained. "When a child reaches puberty, there's a normal storm of conflict inside him between wanting freedom and needing to depend on his mother. But when she puts too tight a rein on him, she forces him to look for ways to get away from her."

So, he runs. Last year, 51 kids in the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove area took off, most for one, maybe two days. They don't usually go far, friends put them up for a couple of nights and then they nearly always show up for school.

That's when they're picked up by the local police and returned to their worried parents. Often the juvenile officer handling the case will suggest counseling through Omni-House, a youth services bureau that operates out of a storefront at 516 N. Milwaukee Ave. in Wheeling.

THE COUNSELING is not just for the runaway, it's for the entire family.

"We don't isolate the child and say, hey, you're the patient here, you're the one who needs to be fixed," Wells said. "The whole family is in trouble."

After talking individually with the child and the parents, the professional psychologists, social workers and ministers at Omni-House set up the kind of counseling they think will be most beneficial.

Sometimes, it's essentially marriage counseling, to help the parents recognize and work out the problems between them that are affecting the child.

The child is not allowed, however, to blame his behavior on his parents' difficulties. He is encouraged to join Omni-House teen groups, not therapy groups, but kids involved in a variety of projects and activities. As part of the group, the child must learn to accept the responsibility for his acts and function as a contributing member.

THE FIGURES are not an entirely accurate measure of the success of the Omni-House approach, but out of the 51 local teenagers who left home last year, only four felt as though they had to get away again.

"We've found that getting to the parents seems to be the answer — approaching the fact that a kid runs away as a family problem," Wells said. "As long as the relationship between the parents improves and so increases their effectiveness as parents, the behavior of the child almost always improves. Unfortunately, the converse is also true."

Vacancies on village panels to remain unfilled

Vacancies on Wheeling's advisory boards and commissions will remain unfilled for at least the next few weeks.

Trustee Al Lang, chairman of the judiciary and purchasing commission, said the board still has several applicants to interview before action can be taken in filling the vacancies. Lang said he would schedule interviews as soon as possible. "But it's going to take a little while," he said.

So far the village board has interviewed 30 applicants and commissioners seeking reappointment. Seven persons failed to come to scheduled interviews, and three persons notified the board they could not appear until a later date.

The interviews, arranged earlier this month, were scheduled after Lang suggested dissolving several commissions for lack of activity. Problems with the commissions have been a recurring issue in the village, with some commissioners charging that the village board has failed to provide direction for their activities.

Recently, members of the zoning board and plan commission have complained that the one vacancy on each of their boards has created quorum problems. Several meetings were canceled this summer because not enough members were in attendance.

There have been openings on these two commissions since last year when Douglas Cargill vacated his seats on both. Although there has been considerable discussion about these vacancies, the village board only recently began to take steps to fill them.

DURING THE interviews, members of the board questioned applicants on their reasons for requesting certain commissions, the time they could devote to the commission, and whether they would be willing to serve on other commissions if the seat they requested was not available.

Some applicants were also asked about possible conflicts of interest as well as the impact on recent government scandals on their views of public service. In some cases, the board members openly recommended that certain applicants be appointed.

Lang said once the interviews are completed, the board members will have to meet to decide who should be recommended to fill the vacancies. The trustee said this meeting might be lengthy because of the large number of applicants.

During this meeting, the trustees will also decide what action to take on Lang's proposed dissolution of the industrial, human relations and public relations commissions.

Ticket deadline drawing near for annual dinner

Time is running out for residents to purchase tickets for Saturday's dinner dance which is part of the 11th Annual Buffalo Grove Days celebration.

This year's festivities, which will begin tomorrow and run through Monday, will take place in a Roaring 20's setting.

Promoters of the dinner dance have emphasized that reservations must be made in advance. They have said ticket sales have been going slowly and have urged residents to come to the dance and help make Buffalo Grove Days a success.

Tickets for the dinner dance, which will be at the Ranch Mart Shopping Center, Dundee and Buffalo Grove roads, are $5 each. Promoters said the price is the same as the last four years even though food prices have increased substantially.

Tickets can be purchased at the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd., Foremost Liquors in the Buffalo Grove Mall or Rose-Lynn Flooring in the Ranch Mart. Tickets are also available by calling Bobbi Katz at 537-1498.

COCKTAILS WILL BE served at 7 p.m., with dinner at 8 p.m. The buffet dinner will include beef, chicken, ham, Swedish meat balls, several salads and a relish tray. Beer on tap will also be available.

In the event of an overflow crowd, those who are not served dinner will receive a refund, according to Norm Katz, co-chairman of the festival.

Bill Scott and his band will provide dance music from 9:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Although not compulsory, residents are urged to come to the dinner dance dressed in Roaring 20's attire. Prizes will be given for the best costumes.

One highlight of the dance will be the presentation of the citizens commendation award to the person chosen as Buffalo Grove's outstanding resident in 1973. Village Pres. Gary Armstrong will make the presentation.

Township revenue sharing funds up

Wheeling Township will receive $204,000 in federal revenue sharing funds next year, more than twice as much as had been expected.

Township Supervisor Ethyl Kolerus said the township had expected about $96,000, the same amount received last year. She said she is uncertain why the large amount of money was allocated because of a complicated formula used to figure revenue sharing. The money will be paid in quarterly installments.

Revenue sharing is a program whereby local taxing bodies are given federal money to spend more or less as they wish according to loose federal guidelines.

THIS AQUARIUM was simply no match for Seymour, the missing snake which troubled Buffalo Grove residents this past weekend. Here, David Pearson, the youth who was taking care of Seymour, points out how the serpent escaped. Although Pearson says police OK'd his snakes, he now faces a bill for the search costs.

I won't pay for snake hunt: keeper

By JEANNETTE DeWYZE

Although Buffalo Grove officials say they are continuing with plans to bill David Pearson for costs of the recent village snake hunt, the youth stated flatly that he would not pay.

The snake hunt developed Saturday afternoon when Pearson, 18, told police that Seymour, which he described as being a deadly cobra snake, escaped from his residence at 568 Maple Dr.

After three days of frantic search, however, village officials announced that they believed Seymour was a non-poisonous rat snake. Officials based this opinion on testimony from a snake expert who examined a shedded skin which police said came from the escaped snake.

Pearson was unaware of the village getting ready to bill or sue him until contacted by The Herald yesterday.

"I WOULD TAKE it to the highest court I could find," Pearson said when asked about the possibility of the village initiating civil action in the courts to collect the damages.

The decision to attempt to bill Pearson for the search costs came in the form of a resolution which was passed by a 6-0 vote of the village board Monday night.

The resolution states that the village should determine the cost of the search and present a bill to Pearson. In the event Pearson cannot or will not pay the bill, the resolution directs the village attorney to initiate the civil action.

In proposing the resolution, Trustee Thomas Mahoney said he did not think village taxpayers should be forced to pay for a search that was caused by the negligence of one resident.

Pearson said yesterday, however, that he did not feel he had been guilty of any negligence in connection with the snake.

IN DISPUTING THE charge of negligence Pearson said he informed the police that he was keeping the snakes the second day after he received them for safekeeping from Eugene Bowling, a Wheeling friend. This was about a month and a half ago, he said.

He said he invited Buffalo Grove police officer Charles Weidner in to look at the snakes, which included Seymour, two boa snakes and a water snake.

In addition, Pearson said he and Bowling asked Weidner to check on the legality of keeping the snakes. He said he offered to remove the snakes immediately if there was any law prohibiting them or if he was presented by a petition signed by 50 village residents asking for removal of the snakes.

ABOUT A WEEK later the police told Pearson that he could legally keep the snakes, Pearson said. While the police have confirmed the entire incident, police chief Harry Walsh has said that the department was mistakenly acting on "bad advice."

Pearson also said he would refuse to pay for the search costs because he disapproved of the manner in which police conducted the snake hunt.

Pearson said although he had consented to the shoot-to-kill order which police issued, he felt that the shotguns used in the snake hunt were both unnecessary and dangerous. He also said he felt police should not have started the search at the house and then moved outward, as they did, since Pearson said he thought this would tend to drive the snake away.

Although Pearson voiced criticism of the police methods in hunting Seymour, he said Monday that he was following a police recommendation to avoid further public comment on the snake itself. He said the recommendation was aimed at (Continued on page 5)

Valenza daughter full-time clerk

Lynnette Valenza, 18, daughter of former village trustee Michael Valenza, has been hired as a records clerk in the Wheeling Police Department.

Miss Valenza served as a temporary clerk in the department from early June to Aug. 13, when she was hired on a permanent basis. Although the job opening was posted in the village hall, none of the village employees applied for the post.

Lt. Thomas Conte said he interviewed four persons for the job, including Miss Valenza. He said three of the interviews were conducted for the temporary position, with the fourth person applying for the position after the temporary job was filled.

"The position turned into a full-time position," he said, noting that the police department hired the temporary to cover the department until the 1973-74 budget was approved.

Miss Valenza's duties include "the processing and filing of all records and correspondence in the records department," according to Conte. Although the other records clerks also act as police matrons, Conte said Miss Valenza will not serve in this capacity because she is not legally old enough to do so.

Village Mgr. George Passolt said the position has a salary of $604 per month.

Miss Valenza applied for the police department position in April, while her father was still trustee. She was not hired, however, until June when her father retired from the village board.

Papers cut press runs

by C. W. ORR
United Press International
It's not that there's been less news lately. It's just that there's less paper and so some newspapers have been thinner.

The Wall Street Journal said this week it was forced to trim the number of pages and cut its printing run because of the newsprint shortage which is caused by strikes against Canadian paper mills and Canadian railroads. The Journal cut its editorial page to half, eliminating the daily cartoon, humor section and reviews. The right-hand part of the editorial page has been used for news stories and continuations of front page matter. Elsewhere around the nation, newspapers with short supplies of paper have taken measures ranging from reducing the size of comic strips, to putting limits on advertising and eliminating Saturday editions.

CANADA'S PARLIAMENT will consider legislation today to order an end to the six-day-old strike against the Canadian Pacific, Canadian National and nine smaller lines.

Canada's third largest paper producer, Abitibi Pulp and Paper Co. Ltd., has resumed contract talks with the United Paperworkers International Union. The company is not struck, but union and industry observers believe a settlement at Abitibi could set a pattern for other companies that have been shut down by strikes.

In Chicago, the Sun-Times and Daily News have reduced total number of pages and imposed some restrictions on newsstand supplies and out-of-town circulation.

The Minneapolis papers, afternoon Star and morning Tribune, began reducing their edition sizes last week.

The Pittsburgh Press said it would suspend or curtail some editorial features, restrict advertising volume and limit newsstand sales.

IN BOISE, IDAHO, publisher Robert Miller Jr. of the Idaho Statesman, asked his staff for tighter editing, smaller headlines, less art and fewer features to reduce the number of pages.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer dropped some Sunday features because of the shortage and used leftover holiday color rolls for some Tuesday editions.

The Milwaukee Journal said its paper would be smaller and fewer copies would be sold. The Milwaukee Sentinel reduced its size.

Madison Newspapers Inc., publisher of the Wisconsin State Journal and the Madison Capital Times, said it had not received a paper shipment since Aug. 10. The papers restricted ad sizes, eliminated some features and cut down newsstand sales.

Herald forced to impose some cuts

Paddock Publications, publishers of the daily Herald, has taken emergency measures to offset the impact of the newsprint shortage and permit as near normal operations as possible.

Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor and publisher, said supplies to area newsstands have been cutback to "ensure uninterrupted service to home delivery customers."

He said The Herald has been forced to suspend circulation sales promotion efforts, curtail non-essential news content and impose some limitations on advertising sizes.

PUBLICATION OF the firm's weekend product, The Suburbanite, was temporarily suspended last week. There will be no edition Sunday, Sept. 2.

Because of the paper shortage, The Herald will not publish an edition for Labor Day, Sept. 3.

"Our major effort will be to continue publishing as complete a daily news product as is possible and to serve as many of our advertisers as we can," said Hayes. "We ask for understanding and cooperation from our readers and advertisers during this critical period."

'Blackout' cable replaced

Work crews from the Commonwealth Edison Co. yesterday were replacing a burned cable following a fire that caused a temporary blackout at O'Hare Airport late Tuesday evening.

Firemen from the Chicago's 6th Division extinguished a fire which began around 11 p.m. in an electrical equipment vault beneath a manhole near the east end of the airport. The fire caused a blackout that lasted for more than an hour and affected three buildings within the airport complex, 300 guest rooms at the O'Hare International Tower and part of a 9,000-car capacity garage near the hotel.

All power was restored shortly after midnight when engineers from Commonwealth Edison redirected the power load onto the two cables not damaged by the fire.

E. T. Quinlan, a spokesman from the Commonwealth Edison Co., said the cause of the cable fire is not yet known. However, he added that the fire "could have been started by heat generated by the cable itself or by hot weather."

According to a hotel spokesman, most of the guests who occupied the 300 guest rooms at the O'Hare International Towers slept through the ordeal while some moved to the unaffected section of the newly built hotel.

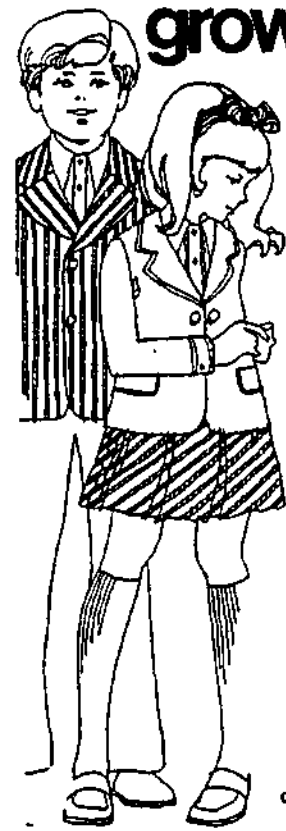

Workers from the power company are replacing the 34,000 volt burned cable and cleaning the area after firemen pumped dry chemicals into the manhole to put out the fire.

School milk cutback may be restored

The government's school milk subsidy program might be restored for 46 million children this fall if Congress votes to override an administration budget cutback. The milk subsidy program, cut sharply last July, eliminated all schools which provide milk as an integral part of their school lunch program, and retained schools which have no lunch program.

Probe severity of winter fuel shortage

A legislative study unit in Springfield heard testimony yesterday from fuel firms, farm groups and school chiefs to determine the severity of this winter's fuel shortage. The panel was told: a food shortage was possible due to lack of gas to dry crops. Many schools will not be able to remain open throughout winter. On the basis of current LP gas contracts, state users could fall 115 million gallons short of the 1971 use figure.

Weaver believes the plan is to determine the exposure the governor is receiving. Walker's press secretary says it's to hear the problems of state from an outside source.

White House to appeal historic ruling

Sirica: 'give tapes to me'

(From Herald news services)
Chief U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica — taking what he called the "middle ground" — Wednesday ordered President Nixon to produce Watergate-oriented White House tapes and documents for his private inspection.

The White House announced almost immediately that Nixon would not comply, hinting an appeal might be taken directly to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Sirica's unprecedented action was in answer to the suit by special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox, seeking the tapes and other documents for what might be conclusive evidence about allegations of perjury, conspiracy to obstruct justice and other criminal activities on the part of Nixon's former White House and campaign aides.

Sirica, in his 23-page opinion, said he should study the materials first to see which — if any — could go to the Watergate grand jury without violating national security, or whether they were relevant at all to the grand jury's investigation.

The decision was not a clear victory for Cox, but the thrust clearly was in his favor, and a spokesman said Cox and his prosecuting team were "naturally very pleased."

Sirica said he had tried "to walk the middle ground between a failure to decide the question of executive privilege at one extreme, and a wholesale delivery of tapes to the grand jury at the other."

Sirica rejected as "not persuasive" arguments by White House lawyers that Nixon alone can decide to withhold the tapes to protect the public interest and the privacy of the presidency, and that the doctrine of separation of powers prevented any court from compelling him to release them.

Said Sirica: "The grand jury has a right to every man's evidence," including that held by the President.

The White House responded that the ruling was "inconsistent" with the President's position that to release the tapes would violate a confidentiality of the presidency necessary to the conduct of the office.

Given five days by Sirica to appeal, the White House said, "Counsel are now considering the possibility of obtaining appellate review or how otherwise to sustain the President's position."

That was seen as a hint that the case might be taken directly to the Supreme Court, where the case is destined for resolution.

Just hours before Sirica's decision, the White House urged him to reject a similar demand for the tapes by the Senate Watergate committee, charging the group has exceeded its authority by conducting a "criminal investigation and trial."

The committee asked for immediate release of the tapes, but Sirica said he would take a few days to consider that request and when to hold hearings.

Watergate committee chairman Sen. Sam Ervin hailed Sirica's ruling as "a great victory in the search for truth," and said if the Supreme Court didn't uphold the order, "I fear we have lost the Republic."

In Springfield, Watergate conspirator James McCord, convicted with six other bugging defendants in Judge Sirica's courtroom in January, called the decision "great," and said it was "absolutely essential" that the tapes be revealed.

Quake relief effort slow; toll rises

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Shortages of water, electricity and even wood for coffins hampered relief efforts Wednesday as President Luis Echeverria left by bus for the mountainous areas in central Mexico shattered Tuesday by a violent earthquake.

The death toll, which stood at 500 officially with some unofficial estimates running nearly 500 higher, was still rising.

The Mexico City daily El Herald said 600 died. The El Sol said 924 were dead.

Price limit back on gas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A special appeals court Wednesday temporarily reinstated Phase IV price controls on some 165,000 brand name gasoline dealers — reviving the possibility that motorists will find gas stations closed in protest during the Labor Day weekend.

A spokesman for the American Automobile Assn. said the ruling was certain to make gas station operators "angry and resentful" but it is too soon to know whether this will revive plans for a holiday shutdown.

An official of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Assn. said Wednesday dealers will ask the U.S. Supreme Court to stay the appellate court decision and his organization will make no shutdown threats while the case is in court.

The price controls, scheduled to go into effect Saturday, were reimposed by U.S. Circuit Court Judge Edward A. Tamm who was acting for a special temporary court of appeals established to handle disputes over President Nixon's economic control program.

A federal judge had lifted the controls last Friday, saying they would put some gas stations out of business. The ruling was appealed by Justice Department attorneys on behalf of the Cost of Living Council, which administers the price controls.

The court yesterday gave attorneys for the government and the brand name gasoline dealers until Sept. 14 to file legal briefs before a formal ruling is delivered.

Other counts ran between 400 and 600. At least 2,000 persons were reported injured and tens of thousands were left homeless.

Trucks were sent from the cities of Puebla and Veracruz with wood for coffins.

As dawn broke survivors dug through the ruins of their homes. The dead were laid out in private homes, local hospitals and blankets on the streets. Some of them were still under the debris.

The death toll rose as reports came in from outlying villages and crews continued to clear the wreckage.

Rain ripped the area Tuesday night but cleared by dawn. Residents took little notice of it.

In Orizaba, Mayor Humberto Gutierrez compared the quake to the one that destroyed Managua, Nicaragua, last December. "We didn't have as many deaths. But many people suffered the same. Many lost their homes. Many died," he said.

The Orizaba death count went above 100 Wednesday with more bodies expected to be found.

In the quake-torn areas, bystanders milled in the streets waiting to see the president and watching wrecking crews work in the rain. The rain turned dust and debris to mud, hampered relief efforts and sent loose roof tiles and bricks falling into the streets.

Municipal officials in Ciudad Serdan, Orizaba, Cordoba and other stricken towns were still receiving damage reports from outlying areas. The quake centered around 18,700-foot Orizaba volcano, a green mountain area dotted with tiny villages nestled far from normal lines of communications.

Demolition crews worked on damaged buildings. In Ciudad Serdan and Rio Blanco in the Orizaba Valley, whole city blocks were left in ruins. Partially damaged buildings had to be destroyed, despite protests from owners.

Most of the churches in the area, made of adobe and wood, had to be destroyed.

Thirst became a major problem Wednesday as villagers suffered their second full day without drinking water. Mayor Gutierrez reported many were leaving containers in the streets to collect rainwater. Health department officials were vaccinating survivors against typhoid and trying to convince them not to drink unboiled water.

Crash in Spain kills 24 in a day of air mishaps

(From Herald news services)

Three separate jet air mishaps Wednesday claimed a total of 24 deaths and 15 persons injured.

The most serious accident was in Spain, where a four-engine jet transport of the U.S. Military Command crashed and burst into flames on a landing approach to Torrejon Air Base near Madrid. All but one of the 25 persons aboard were killed.

The C141 Starlifter was on a flight from Athens to McGuire via Madrid. The Air Force said the plane carried 17 passengers, eight crew members and almost nine tons of cargo.

In another incident, an apparent mechanical failure in a tail section control of a TWA jetliner hurled five persons standing in the rear of the plane against the walls in a violent crack-the-whip motion.

Three passengers were injured seriously and two stewardesses suffered back sprains. Several others among the 127 passengers and crew of nine complained of bumps and bruises but none were hospitalized.

The trouble occurred late Tuesday night about 25,000 feet over the Pacific Ocean on a Boeing 707 TWA flight from Hong Kong to San Francisco. The plane was 35 minutes out of Los Angeles International Airport when the shaking began.

A Czechoslovak airliner en route from Damascus to Prague crash-landed in a field near Nicosia airport because of engine trouble. A fire broke out as passengers were leaving the plane through emergency exits.

Nine persons were injured, none seriously, in the Soviet-built Tupolev 104 which carried 62 passengers and a crew of eight.

Secret congress denounces Soviets

Re-affirm Mao, Chou power

HONG KONG (UPI) — The Communist Party of China, meeting in secret session in Peking, held its 10th National Congress and unanimously reaffirmed the leadership of Mao Tse-tung and Premier Chou En-lai, according to a communiqué.

The congress, in effect, endorsed the Mao-Chou program aimed at improving relations with the United States and took the unusual step of denouncing the Soviet Union by name.

The Congress, rumored for the past few weeks, was held from Aug. 24-28.

It was unusual for two reasons: It was held in secret and it was much shorter than party congresses of the past.

The congress unanimously adopted a political report — a sort of state-of-the-nation address — by Chou, adopted a new party constitution and elected a new Central Committee, consisting of 195 full members and 124 alternates.

A communiqué broadcast by Peking Radio and the New China News Agency (NCNA) said 1,249 delegates, representing more than 28 million party members, attended the congress.

The lineup of the party leadership appeared little changed from what it had been since the downfall of the late Lin Biao almost two years ago, in September, 1971.

The initial reports on the congress indicated that Mao and Chou had successfully repulsed and subdued a counter-attack by radical elements, identified with some of the Lin policies, during recent weeks.

The communiqué touched only briefly on international affairs. That undoubtedly was covered more thoroughly in Chou's political report, which probably will be issued later. It called for unity with other international groups "against imperialism, colonialism and neo-colonialism and in particular against the hegemonism of the two superpowers, the United States and the Soviet Union."

Considering the fact that the world's largest Communist party was denouncing the first and most powerful Communist nation in the world by name, the comments on the United States were considered soft indeed. The initial interpretation of this would indicate that the congress gave its endorsement to the continued improvement of Sino-American relations.

Education Today...by Wandalyne Rice

Teachers union departs from tradition

by WANDALYN RICE
Earlier this summer the High School Dist. 214 Board and teachers signed a three-year salary contract — and a lot of people assumed all board-teacher hassles would end until 1976.

As the summer has gone on, however, it has started to look as though that was a bad guess.

First, in June, Dorothy Lewis, president of the Dist. 214 Education Association, came to the board to protest a policy on the length of a teacher's work day which the board had adopted. The policy had specified the number of minutes teachers would work and she said teachers were concerned about it. The issue took several meetings to resolve.

THEN, TWO WEEKS ago, Miss Lewis and the association leaders were back before the board, asking that she and another officer of the association be re-elected of one additional class each so they could work for the teachers' group.

Monday, they were back again — this time offering to reimburse the board for the time the two teachers were asking for. The board said no.

These exchanges are pretty minor in themselves, but they mark a significant departure from past practice in Dist. 214.

In addition, some remarks made Monday by Vince Carloti, former association president, may point out some problems the three-year contract may cause that were not foreseen.

In the past association leaders have not come to the board outside of negotiations to ask for policy changes — whether on teacher work day or anything else. But now, because the three-year contract allows for negotiations on non-salary "emergency" items, they may well be spending more time in front of the board than ever before.

The problem with the work day and with extra time off for association officers would normally be an item for negotiation, but now the leaders can't be sure there will be any negotiations until 1976 and it's doubtful that the problems are considered "emergencies." So they will come straight to the board.

BUT THE appearance of the leaders of the teachers before the board indicates another problem that may confront the association because of the three-year contract. For years, teachers group's main reason for existence has been annual salary negotiations. Now there is a problem of how the Dist. 214 Education Association will occupy its time between now and 1976.

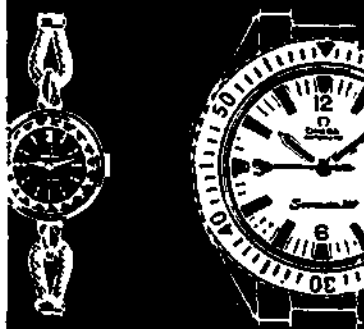

Carloti told the board Monday he hopes the association will be able to use its time during the three-year contract to "work on things that are important to education." Board member Jack Costello suggested, however, that they might occupy themselves "working up grievances."

Whatever the association and its leaders do, they clearly have to do something that teachers believe is useful. After all, if 1976 comes around and the organization has atrophied completely, it could cause lots of trouble during negotiations that year.

Chances are, then, that the High School Dist. 214 board is going to be seeing more of the teacher leadership during this three-year contract than they ever thought possible. And, during the course of the contract, especially if the association does dedicate itself to proposals for curriculum change and other ways to improve education, the board is likely to find their appearances almost as troublesome as those annual salary negotiations.

Assessment forms sent to Cook County homeowners

Tax assessment questionnaires are going to be sent to owners of single-family homes and two-flat or three-flat apartment buildings in Cook County, assessor P. J. Cullerton said.

The questionnaires, which seek specific information to update and expand the tax assessment records, are in the mail to Elk Grove Township homeowners.

The information sought on the questionnaires is needed to implement Cullerton's new assessment system which is based on market value.

Cullerton said the questionnaire has two purposes:

- "First, we hope to obtain more information than ever on all homes in the county in order to make assessments more accurate and fair.
- "Second, the questionnaire also will provide us with much needed information on older homes for which records in general are not as complete as for newer houses."

SENDING OUT the 800,000 questionnaires will cost the county $180,000 for postage and materials, according to Dennis Dunne, director of communications for the assessor's office.

Dunne said that if homeowners ignore the questionnaire the county will send them a second copy, then resort to sending out field inspectors to collect the needed information.

Dunne said he was optimistic that homeowners would cooperate with the project. He said that in a trial of the questionnaires in an area of Maine Township including part of Des Plaines, the county received responses to 75 per cent of the questionnaires sent out. That pilot program was conducted in June, Dunne said.

Dunne said the county was not sending the questionnaires to owners of condominiums or of larger apartment buildings because information in the assessor's office on those types of housing is "pretty accurate."

THE INFORMATION collected on the questionnaires will be used in the quadrennial reassessment of homes in Elk Grove, Maine and Schaumburg townships this year, Dunne said.

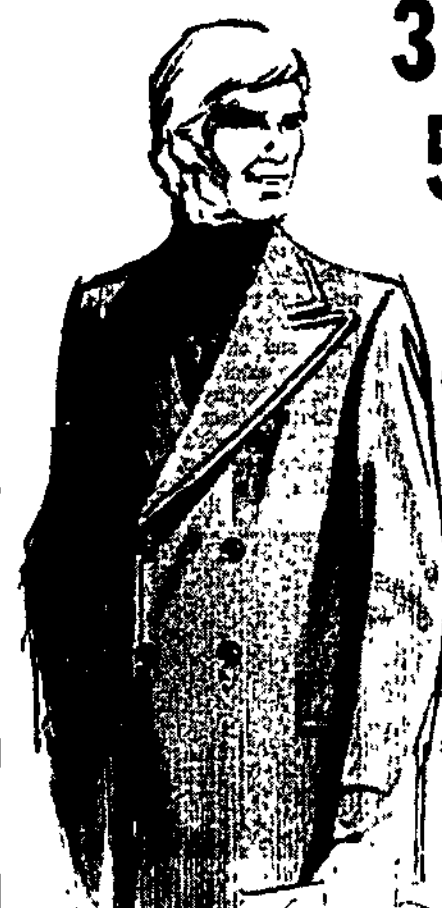

The questionnaires will be mailed to various parts of the county over several months, he said.

Included in the questionnaire are inquiries about such factors as the location of the property in relation to the street or alley, the availability of utilities, the number of rooms, the type of heating or air-conditioning and the type of construction of the building.

For help in filling out the questionnaire, property owners can call a number listed on the letter accompanying the questionnaire or can visit the assessor's branch office at 1619 Glenview Rd. in Glenview.

The two page questionnaire is accompanied by a postage paid envelope addressed to the county assessor's office.

Sunbather bares his, er, soul

by STIRLING MORITA

Jim Willis bared his soul yesterday afternoon, but his birthday suit was a little too much for Hanover Park police.

Police "pinched" Willis, 50, on charges of disorderly conduct and public indecency after they found him sunning his bare backside in his backyard at 7102 Meadowbrook Dr., Hanover Park.

Two plainclothes detectives were responding to a complaint filed about 2 p.m. at the police station by a citizen.

Willis staged the brown-in-the-buff incident with help from his lawyer, William Stukas. Willis hopes to provide a test case on the question of the legality of nude sunbathing.

The self-proclaimed nude sun bather, who was released on $1,000 bond, is scheduled to appear at 9:30 a.m. Sept. 20 in the Schaumburg branch of the Circuit Court.

ARRESTING OFFICERS said they had been aware of "Mr. Willis' intentions," but added that they did not know the incident would take place until the complainant came to the station. Willis said part of the plans included a specially picked complainant who would walk by and report it to the police.

"I'm doing it primarily for a religious motivation, you might say," Willis said.

"I'm not afraid of getting arrested. Jesus Christ was arrested, and he was right," he added.

Willis, a marketing statistician for a housewares firm, went into his backyard about 2 p.m. The yard is about 50 by 60 feet with a chain-link fence around the perimeter. The neighbors have an unobstructed view of Willis' backyard.

Willis had spread out a white towel in the northeast corner of the yard next to the house. He sat down and talked to his wife who was whispering from a nearby window.

He waited a minute, and then gingerly slipped his pants off. He lay with only the backside exposed.

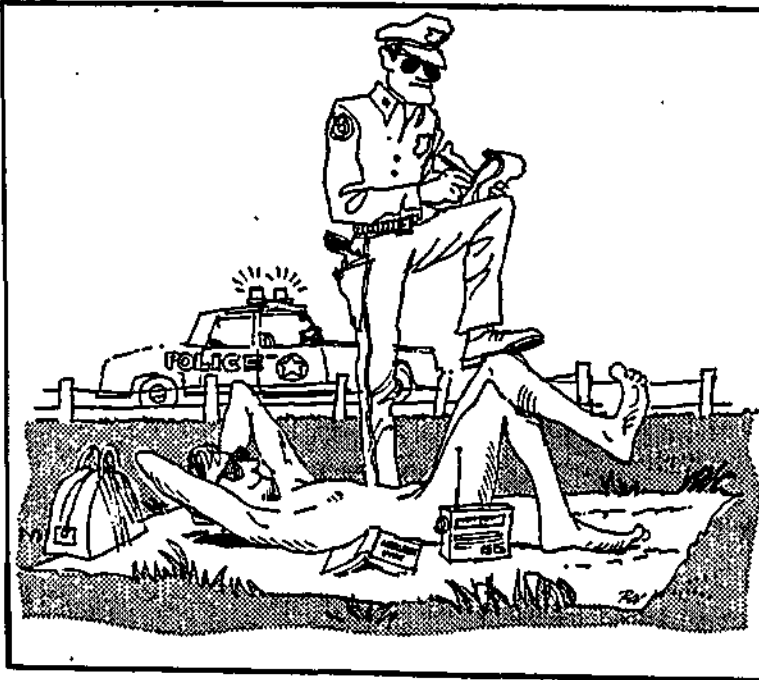

HE SAID HE WAS not really embarrassed to take his clothes off, but added, "If there was a group of 30 or 40 persons along the fence yelling and screaming, then it might be a little embarrassing."

A neighbor couple did not seem to take note of Willis' nude body, but a few minutes later a female voice called out. "Apparently, it doesn't bother you that I have two teen-aged girls out here."

The detectives then walked through the backyard gate and advised Willis of his constitutional rights. Willis put on his clothes, was handcuffed and taken to the police station for booking procedures.

Willis said he at one time had opposed pornography in Chicago. He added that his life took a 180-degree turn when he had an "awakening" one night.

"I was sleeping one night. And I thought, 'Who is higher than the Supreme Court? God of course,' and God made us nude when we were born. The Bible does not say nudity is bad," Willis, who says he is a religious man, added.

THE RIGHT TO sunbathe nude without police interference is the goal of Jim Willis, Hanover Park. Willis staged a nude sunbathing incident and was arrested. He plans to make a test case.

He recalled that his wife and his oldest daughter were somewhat against his intentions and that his youngest daughter "had a freer mind."

"I've gone nude sun-bathing in DuPage County. I have my place," he said. "I'm not doing it (protesting) just for myself, but for a cause."

AS COMPARED TO topless and bottomless bars, adult magazines and movies and nude bathing beaches around the world, he said nude sun bathing is nothing.

"There's nothing wrong with nudity. And there's nothing wrong with sunbathing," Willis said. "Two rights make a third right."

Mrs. Peggy Troccoli, 7097 Edgebrook Lane, a neighbor, said, "I was shocked. I was dumbfounded. I was certainly not happy with my teen-aged girls back there."

Final touches being put on parade

by JOE FRANZ

Final preparations are being made for Sunday's annual Buffalo Grove parade.

The parade, which will begin at 1 p.m., is one of many activities planned for the four-day Labor Day weekend.

Between 1,200 and 1,500 persons will participate in the parade. Floats and marching bands from various local organizations will take part with awards going to the best bands and floats.

The parade will originate at Arlington Heights Road and Bernard Drive. It will proceed down Bernard to Raupp Boulevard and then north on Raupp to the village hall, where the reviewing stand will be located.

FOLLOWING THE parade, residents can participate in a variety of activities. At 1 p.m. Sunday an art fair will open in front of the village hall. About 50 artists from throughout the state will enter the fair, which will feature watercolor paintings, acrylic and oil paintings, drawings and graphics.

Cash awards and ribbons will be given for the best works. Anyone wishing to enter the fair should call Ted Uskali at 537-5280.

There also will be a homemaking contest following the parade. Residents will compete in needlecraft, baking, canning and gardening. The resident judged to be the top homemaker will be crowned "Homemaking Queen."

In addition, a motorcycle demonstration will be given by the Medinah Motor Corps, near the village hall.

OTHER POST-PARADE activities will include a variety of games and rides. Ten different games, costing 10 cents each, will be set up around the village hall. Norm Katz, the other co-chairman, said more than 6,000 prizes will be awarded.

Concession stands selling beer, brat, soft drinks and hot dogs will be open throughout the day.

Sunday's activities will end with a fireworks display sponsored by the Buffalo Grove Jaycees.

Bogart said two buses will be in operation from 12:15 p.m. until 9 p.m. to provide transportation to and from the parade area. He said the service is being provided to discourage persons from driving.

One bus will pick up residents in Lake County and the other will transport residents from the Cambridge and Mill Creek subdivisions. Both buses will go to the village hall.

PICKUP POINTS in Lake County will be at Castle Wood Lane and Checker Drive, Checker and Farrington Drive, Checker and Essington Lane, Checker and Ridge Field Lane, Indian Spring and Ridge Field, Ivy Hall Lane and Indian Spring, Dorncliff Lane and Indian Spring, and Twisted Oak and Burnt Ember lanes.

Residents in Cambridge can catch the bus at Cambridge Drive and Sussex Court, Cambridge and Anthony Road, and Cambridge and University Drive. Pickup points in Mill Creek are at Green Ridge Road and Thornton Lane, Mill Creek Drive and Radcliffe Road, and Thornton and Radcliffe.

In addition there will be one other pickup point at Golfview and Raupp Boulevard.

preventing the further spread of public panic over the snake.

THUS, HE REFUSED to comment on whether he thought Seymour was a rat snake or a cobra snake.

He did say, however, that he planned to go with a police officer to a zoo where he could identify a snake which looked like Seymour.

Pearson described the snake as being black, red, and gold.

"I also knew that the snake had a hood, because it tried to bite me a few times," he said.

Village Attorney Richard Raysa yesterday said when he was first consulted about the potential suit against Pearson he had expressed the opinion that the search costs could be recovered. However, Raysa said he was unaware that the police had told the youth the snakes were not illegal.

If further legal research reveals that a suit would be unfeasible, Raysa said he would recommend that the village not prosecute Pearson.

Faced with a disorderly conduct charge and a possible court battle, Pearson said yesterday that his primary concern was still the recovery of the snake.

"I'm just worried about the snake biting someone," he said.

Johnny Cash in concert at Arlington Park.

And his name is Johnny

"My name is Sue, how do you do."

It wasn't Sue at all, but the funniest thing from it. It was Johnny Cash Tuesday night at the Future of America Fair.

He still looks beaten up and weary, haggard and worn, and he still belts out the tunes in the same scratchy voice and style that brought him not so long ago from the county fairs to the glaring lights of Hollywood and television.

The people who followed Johnny Cash in the first place, the working men and women in the small towns who hear his records inside the dusty floored taverns, came to Arlington Park to listen and sing along. So did the businessmen and executives — about 14,000 in all.

He sang of Folsom Prison and Jackson, Miss., like only a person who had been there could. This was Johnny Cash, farm boy turned city slicker, still with a country drawl.

Reenact Joliet, Marquette expedition

Canoelists reenacting the 3,000-mile expedition of voyageurs Louis Joliet and Jacques Marquette will portage from the Des Plaines River into the Chicago River Saturday afternoon.

The eight voyageurs who began the canoe trip in mid-May in St. Ignace, Mich., will paddle down the Chicago River to Lake Michigan, then paddle north in the lake to Green Bay, Wis.

The men will arrive at the Portage in the Cook County Forest Preserves west of Harlem Avenue and south of 47th Street in Lyons on Saturday afternoon. Cook County Board Pres. George Dunne, other state and local dignitaries and 800 boy scouts will greet the canoelists. The portage lies along a major fur-trade and war-party artery fought over for 175 years by the French, Indians, English and Americans seeking to control the gateway to the Mississippi River and the West.

Among the activities planned for the weekend are dedication of a 12½-mile hiking trail to the Portage from Bemis Woods and dedication of a plaque honoring the reenactment of the voyage.

Saturday night the canoelists will camp near Damen Avenue at the site of a large cross erected to mark the spot where Marquette spent the winter.

At 2 p.m. Sunday the canoelists will arrive at the Michigan Avenue Bridge for a half-hour program explaining the voyage to spectators. At 3 p.m. His Eminence John Cardinal Cody will offer a High Mass in Pioneer Court as an observance of the 300th anniversary of the voyageurs.

... brought to the public

The DJ: a living exhibition at fair

by MARCIA KRAMER

"It's six and a half away from eleven o'clock. Double-U-M Radio, you and Jack Stockton... Let's go back to Seventy-Two. You were around in Seventy-Two. It was only last year. Sister Rose and the Cornelius Brothers. This song was dynamite last year."

Stockton flicks a switch, grabs for a Marlboro and leans back in his chair as strains of "Too Late To Turn Back Now," a dynamite hit in '72 by Sister Rose and the Cornelius Brothers, come over the monitor.

"This is a way of getting a radio station to the public," he says, flipping his gold lighter and drawing on his cigarette. "That way the station is something more than sounds coming out of the radio in your house or car."

This week, WWMN Radio "the itty-bitty little radio station with the great big hampersticker," Stockton calls it is coming out of the Future of America Fair at the Arlington Park Race Track.

The "deejays" are holed up in a makeshift broadcast booth, a wooden shack plastered with WWMN stickers and aluminum jackets, in the midst of dozens of other booths in the grandstand.

Two sides of the booth are glass, which are covered with finger and nose prints as kids press up against it to get a look at the man behind the voice.

STOCKTON, ONE of five disc jockeys from the Arlington Heights station broadcasting from the fair, acknowledges the gazes with a smile here, a wink

there, and a confession the young admirers can't hear: "I'm really not an exhibitionist. I don't like to be watched."

The eeriness of being pointed and stared at wore off during his first day at the fair, though, and now the 35-year-old "deejay" doesn't seem to mind being in the WWMN fishbowl, one of the most popular attractions at the fair.

In fact, after awhile, "It's fun to be here and meet all the people."

Stockton is one of those guys who really likes his work. "If I didn't, I'd be no good at it," he says, chuckling in an aside. "Some would say I'm no good anyway."

He breaks off suddenly, clears his throat, jabs a button and lowers his voice a few notches. "It's twelve minutes past eleven o'clock." He pauses, then leans closer to the microphone, cooing: "I forgot to tell you how nice you look today..."

A Connie Francis tune takes over, and Stockton takes a few quick sips of coffee from "Teresa's love cup," a red, white and black mug containing the word "love" in several languages. It was sent in by a listener.

Most of Stockton's followers are housewives, "or homemakers as some of them like to be called," and he tries to gear his program toward them.

FOR ONE THING, he has some respect for his audience. "The average housewife is not the dummy so many people think she is, sitting around changing diapers and yacking on the telephone. She's involved in a lot of things."

Whenever possible, Stockton tries to get involved in these things too, interviewing a meat man, for example, during the recent crunch of high prices and low quantity.

He'll talk about just anything on the air, he says, except the traditional trio of taboos: sex, religion and politics, and one more taboo of his own: his family.

"Nine times out of 10 the listeners could care less about my wife or my kids. Their kids say things just as funny as what my kids say."

Stockton fumbles with his headset (the left ear bringing him the program, the right ear, his music director back at the studio), turns a red dial on the console and glances at the daily program log propped up on a turntable. "Stereo radio ninety-two point seven, you need some good furniture?"

Off the air, Stockton spends his time (what else?) listening to the radio, partly for pleasure, partly to keep up with the business. Sometimes he tunes in AM stations, though he considers them "too commercial, too hyped up, too kiddie"; usually he prefers FM, though it often is nothing more than "elevator background" or the muzak common in doctors' and dentists' offices.

THE WWMN outlook is to "try to fill a void," to bridge the gap between the stations which play the Top Forty and those which specialize in Oldies but Goodies.

The substation at the fair is the first venture outside the studio or the fledgling radio station, and the disc jockeys are taking full advantage of it — interviewing celebrity entertainers at the fair, signing up fairgoers for door prize and bumper sticker drawings and in the process attracting (they hope) more listeners.

"That's quite a flight plan," offers one middle-aged man, peering into the mini-studio from the open doorway. "Yes," Stockton agrees, amidst the abundance of dials and wires, "It is like flying a plane, isn't it?"

Man shot 8 times, roommate held

by JOHN MAES

A Des Plaines man was in satisfactory condition yesterday at Holy Family Hospital after being shot eight times at close range by his roommate Tuesday night, according to police.

Peter Kilen, 29, of 910 Beau Dr., was in intensive care yesterday afternoon, a hospital spokesman said. He had been shot in the jaw, chest and hand.

Kilen's roommate, Antal Schmidt, 29, was arrested minutes after the shooting. Associate Judge Marvin J. Peters ordered Schmidt, a Hungarian immigrant, taken to Cook County Jail on $25,000 bond early yesterday. He has been charged by Des Plaines police with attempted murder and aggravated battery.

The shooting stemmed from previous arguments between the two over the use of an automobile they shared, police said. The two worked together as auto mechanics at Laurel Motors, 280 E. Ogden Ave., in Westmont and had been living together in the Des Plaines apartment for about four months.

The incident occurred about 6:30 p.m. Police said Schmidt began shooting at his roommate immediately after Kilen returned from a shopping trip carrying bags of groceries.

Police said they were alerted by a building resident who was aroused by the gunshots. Several other residents also told police they were startled by the shots.

Police, who arrived on the scene about a minute later, nabbed Schmidt as he walked onto a terrace outside the first-floor apartment.

Police said they found Kilen's body lying on the floor of an adjacent apartment, after following a trail of blood from the terrace near where Kilen was shot.

He had apparently staggered into the next apartment through the terrace door in search of help before he fell, while the residents had run into the hall through the front door to investigate the gunshots, police said.

An automatic pistol, used in the shooting as well as a shotgun propped against a sofa were found during a police search of Schmidt's apartment, according to reports. Police had not learned yesterday afternoon if the guns were registered.

It was also noticed during the search that some bedroom furniture had been overturned and a telephone had been ripped from the wall, according to reports. Schmidt had reportedly stayed home from work that day.

Slate's attorneys had difficulty questioning Schmidt Tuesday night. The suspect had been in the U.S. about three years and speaks little English. He is not a U.S. citizen.

Schmidt will be returned to Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court for a hearing Sept. 6.

Growth control conference coming

by LEA TONKIN
BETTER LATE than never: A landmark conference set for Sept. 16-18 in Chicago, is called to discuss what cities, states, the federal government and citizens are doing to control growth and land use.

Rep. Juckett sets new office hours

State Rep. Robert S. Juckett, R-Park Ridge, has announced office hours for his legislative office in Park Ridge, beginning Sept. 3.
Juckett's legislative district includes parts of Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights.
The office, located at 28 Main St., Park Ridge, will be open Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4 p.m.
Appointments for other times may be made by telephoning 823-3142.

At last, the notion that "bigger is better" can be laid to rest in favor of a more creative and positive approach. The purpose of the National Conference on Managed Growth is to explore alternatives, by bringing together the agencies effecting land use changes with those most directly affected — builders, developers, architects and leaders.

"While for years there have been ad hoc protests against specific building projects in various parts of the country, we are now witnessing the widespread passages of laws and ordinances to control growth," says John Naisbitt, president of the sponsoring Urban Research Corp. in Chicago. "Nothing like this has happened in this country since the closing of the American frontier at the turn of the century."

"We're experiencing the same citizen opposition to unlimited growth in the Northwest Suburbs. Organized protests against the mammoth Devon-53 proposal in Elk Grove Township are one example."

This concern for the quality of life sometimes turns into an attack on development as the enemy, comments Naisbitt. He sees the conference as a meeting of the minds on this controversial issue.

The conference begins Sunday evening at the Sheraton-Chicago Hotel with a talk by Dr. George Gallup Jr. of the Gallup Poll, on "what Americans think about limiting growth." Additional information on the program is available through Urban Research Corp. in Chicago.

STRONG LIKELIHOOD that Congress will pass some form of land use legislation this fall adds to the timeliness of the conference. A Senate version was passed June 21 and the House is working out its own land use bill.

MAKING SURE clean air stays that way is the aim of environmental groups which testified at the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency hearings in Washington, D. C. this week. Four alternative strategies are offered by the agency to prevent deterioration of clean air. The EPA proposed these standards under court order.

Additional hearings will be conducted Sept. 4 - 5 in Atlanta and Sept. 5 - 6 in Denver, San Francisco and Dallas.

Herald editorial

RTA plan needed now

Despite charges of political gimmickry by Gov. Daniel Walker in ordering a series of public hearings on the proposed Regional Transit Authority, the hearings have produced valuable suggestions by elected officials and civic organizations.

Among the vital suggestions brought forth at suburban hearings were these:

— That financing of the RTA must be based on a long-range program and not on a year-to-year basis.

— That the suburbs must have a real voice on the governing board of the transit authority, proportionate to their population.

— That the transit authority must be made autonomous and removed from political influence.

These are other important considerations that were missing from the plan hammered out by Mayor Daley and House Speaker W. Robert Blair in the last session of the legislature.

Walker was criticized, rightfully, at that time for failure to put forth his own proposal and to seek legislative support for it.

He has begun facing the problem with the public hearings, and we hope that he heeds the warning of those who have answered his call for advice.

If he does, it should be possible for the administration to draft a program which could enable the RTA to be established in the near future.

Assuming that he does so, it will then become incumbent on both Democratic and Republican legislators to support such a program.

It is painfully clear that the so-called leadership of the legislature—and, for practical purposes, that includes Daley—is incapable of producing a non-partisan program.

Blair says he now suspects that Daley is bluffing in his public support of RTA. Blair himself has indicated that the "leadership" will not consider RTA when the legislature reconvenes in October.

Failure to do so would be inexcusable. Transportation experts have warned that the CTA and commuter railroads are on the verge of collapse. Their collapse would mean the collapse of the economy of the metropolitan area, not to mention the entire state of Illinois.

If, as reported, Blair and the other leaders are under political pressure from Downstate legislators to stall RTA, it is their unmistakable duty to persuade them that RTA is vital to the entire state.

Isn't that what "leadership" is about?

Bob Lahey's column

Winning and losing a big fish

by BOB LAHEY
Political Editor

Back in the 30's, when B-grade movies fostered the canard that newspaper work is glamorous, many scripts were based on the myth that everybody in the newsroom wants everybody else's job.

Like most myths, it is exaggerated, but rests upon a grain of truth.

It produced the stereotype of the political writer who longs to return to the toy department and spend his afternoons at football stadiums and baseball parks; the food editor who hungers to be an editorial writer; the editorial writer who feels pangs of envy every time the police reporter goes bolting out of the newsroom after The Big Story.

The only guy I envy currently is Roger Ebert, who was a part-time sportswriter with a definite flair for feature writing when he and I inhabited the same sports desk. Roger currently makes his living by going to movies for free and writing about them, which seems like kind of a fun thing to do.

I grudgingly admit that he displays considerable flair for that, too, a talent of which I would not have suspected of him when he was immersed in science fiction and old comic books.

What brings all this to mind is that I caught, for about the sixth time, the movie "The Old Man and the Sea" on TV the other night.

As everyone knows, it is Hemingway's tale about the old man, deprived of the help of his 10-year-old friend, who fishes alone and engages in a life-and-death struggle with a marlin of gargantuan proportions, and captures it, only to have the fish devoured by sharks before he can return to his shack in triumph.

Being something of a Hemingway buff, I recalled the reviews when the book was published in the early 50's. Many reviewers said the book was Hemingway's protest against the critics—the sharks—who had ripped apart his earlier novel, "Across the River and Into the Trees," on which he had labored mightily, considering it one of his major works.

I remarked that bit of wisdom to my wife, who greeted it in silence.

Presently she opined that that was a rather shallow interpretation of a tale with a much more universal application. "It's about life. It's what could happen to anyone."

Having dispelled a rather comfortable little interpretation of Hemingway's symbolism, that remark left no room for debate.

The tale does indeed invite many interpretations, and being somewhat preoccupied with politics, I fell to pondering examples.

The first that occurred to me, for some reason, was Woodrow Wilson, who exhausted himself, like the old man, in the pursuit of the prize of a League of Nations, only to have it devoured by isolationists.

Depending on your political inclinations, you can probably conjure up many other examples.

Both Richard Ogilvie and Paul Simon came close to landing the big fish they sought—Simon a chance to be governor, Ogilvie a second term and a springboard to bigger things—before they ran into the teeth of the Dan Walker organization. Thomas Eagleton and Hubert Humphrey are good examples. (Barry Goldwater and George McGovern probably don't qualify because it seems necessary to the story for the old man to really believe that he might land his catch.)

If there is a moral in Hemingway's story, it is probably found in two lines—repeated twice in the movie for people of my level of perception, no doubt. Twice he mutters to himself, "I wish the boy was here," and twice he sighs, "I went out too far."

For someone contemplating politics, the tale could be said to suggest two rules: 1. You can't do it alone, and 2. Don't try to go further than your capabilities. (But then, of course, if the old man hadn't gone out that far, he probably never would have hooked the big fish.)

But the overriding message of the tale, for the beginning politician, is even simpler: The sharks are always there.

By the time the movie had ended, I was already contemplating a whole new field of writing, political movie reviewing. But I quickly gave it up.

I'm not sure how many times you could review "The Old Man and the Sea."

'Negative' story blasted

Too bad you didn't run your August 20 headline and story, "Tight Money Squeezing Mortgage Market," in your Thursday, August 23, edition. It would have given the real estate advertisers a lot to think about. At that, it may be a little difficult for your advertising salesmen, when they knock on those real estate company doors next time.

Talk about a positive attitude, your story was a perfect example of how negative news can come back to haunt you. I refer to the second paragraph in the August 20 story. It read:

"If you're still thinking about buying or selling a home this year—think twice. Chances are buyers can't get the money and where's the seller without a buyer?"

How in the world can you print a story like that with such a definite negative approach and then expect your real estate advertisers to greet your salesmen with open arms?

I work with people day in and day out showing them how they can alter their attitudes in this negative world. Clients who are professionals, businessmen and companies are fed up with the attitudes forced on us through the mass media. Why don't you look at the "half full" glass instead of the "half empty" glass?

A very good client of mine comments: "The mass media creates public opinion then implies that it reflects it."

You know the mortgage money isn't as tight as you would have us believe it. You also know that money can be found for good buyers. You also know that homes are selling. But you also know if you tell people how bad things are, and if you tell them what you told them, and if you tell them again, they will soon believe it. Repetition works, I know, I use it in my business, but it works in a positive way.

The Bible puts it this way, "As A Man Thinketh, So Is He." Why don't you give us some good things to think about, on the front page, for just one full week. Fill up the front page with good news, put all the bad news and negative information on pages two and three. Try it for one full week, see what kind of reaction you receive.

Just in case your readers miss the other kind of news, they can read any one of the Chicago papers.

I'd appreciate your printing this letter in its entirety in the Fence post, to see if anyone else, in this big wide wonderful country, feels as I do.

'Keep vitamins on market'

I respectfully urge you to support H.R. 643 introduced by Representative Hosmer, which would amend the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

This urgent request comes as a result of the FDA's recently announced final order which limits to very dangerous narrow ranges the potency and availability of vitamin and mineral supplements.

Representative Hosmer's bill, H. R. 643, draws a distinction between dietary supplements and drugs. Hosmer's bill will subject each to separate, logical and appropriate legislation.

Since we can buy aspirin, alcohol, tobacco and other drugs of questionable safety in any amount we desire, it is not reasonable that safe nutritional substances are curtailed in this manner. The FDA is not proclaiming that vitamins cause disease. We know that vitamins and minerals are necessary to health.

The FDA is not saying that the chemicals currently used as vitamins are dangerous. And the FDA is not restricting just one brand of dietary supplements.

This worries me. I am sure that what the FDA is trying to do in this case is not to the people's best advantage, but the FDA is trying to pass this bill for some reason we can only guess at.

Our health is at stake.

If we fill our bodies with illness producing foods, (snacks, overcooked fresh foods, overprocessed grain products) and do not get enough nutrition then our bodies will be in serious disrepair, our brains slow to function. Even if this is not what the FDA is working for, it is what the result will be.

There is urgent need for immediate hearings and prompt action on H.R. 643 if Congress is to pass this bill in advance of FDA's full implementation next year.

Write to your Representative!

'Remember those MIA's'

Just recently White House officials appealed again to the North Vietnamese government for help in determining the fate of more than 1,300 Americans still listed as missing in Southeast Asia. In a statement presented to about 500 persons attending the final session of a three-day conference of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia, the administration says that "the accounting for the missing and the repatriation of remains are purely humanitarian obligations unrelated to other issues. They could have been largely carried out by now if a spirit of good will and cooperation had been manifested on this subject."

However, the statement says North Vietnam "has failed to comply" with the provisions of last January's cease-fire agreement and "has refused to cooperate in the necessary actions to implement this basic humanitarian obligation."

League members voted earlier to establish a liaison office "somewhere in Southeast Asia" to keep track of efforts to locate the missing men. While most of the MIA's are presumed to be dead, there are some who were known to be prisoners but who were not released earlier this year and were not listed as having died while in Red captivity.

The political hassle of Watergate has shrouded the importance of learning the fate of our missing servicemen. Must they be forgotten?

Sees decline in Christian Science

Thank you for publishing the article, "The Christian Science Church may be disappearing."

Having been a member of a Chicago branch church in which I served in offices ranging from usher to First Reader, I was able to observe many of the problems Mr. Kinsolving mentioned. Not only have Christian Science churches declined in California, but throughout the nation and the world as a whole. This statement is based on a comparison of 1973 figures against 1960 figures published in the Christian Science Journal.

There may be many reasons for the decline of Christian Science. The negative experiences some people have had with the religion is one of them. Eleven cases of polio at a Christian Science school in Connecticut late last year, and church surrender to immunization hasn't done its public image any good.

Suggests a Bible ban

I was more than just a little amused when I read that the school board of Dist. 96 was considering a policy that would apply censorship to all educational materials used in the district's three schools.

I trust that Big Brother Censors will not forget the Tarzan books, since Tarzan and Jane were never "joined in holy wedlock." Damn it! Tarzan and his broad are living "in sin"—and this is a big no-no!

I also suggest that the Bible be banned, that perennially popular book of fairy tales which is filled with sex and violence. Not only is the Old Testament filled with descriptions of orgies, but even incest, in the form of Lot and his daughters, rears its ugly head, not to mention prostitution and homosexuality. Tch, tch. Such reading is not good for innocent children.

On the other hand, good Christians and god-hucksters on TV tell us that we should follow the "Good Book" and live accordingly. Since "an eye for an eye" and a "tooth for a tooth" is mentioned in the eternal fairy tale that never grows old (only more boring), I submit that we should toss out our hard-working, over-criticized police and indulge in our own personal, "Christian" brand of justice.

We could also revert to a plurality of wives, some good old fashioned polygamy, since King David and other Biblical characters had more than one wife, not to mention the "In" they had with the Creator.

As I see it, all this would be moral and proper for the good Christians of 1973 because it was all very moral and proper and legal in Biblical days—and if the Bible was the word of God then, isn't it still—right now?

We know all this happened because the Bible says so, stating that "God was with King David and all he did." And old King David was one helluva swinger—and so was King Solomon, who chased teenagers! Whether or not he was "wise" is a moot question.

Shucks, if we followed the Bible, we could even go about beheading those who stray off the path of Christian "morality," since we are told that God bid

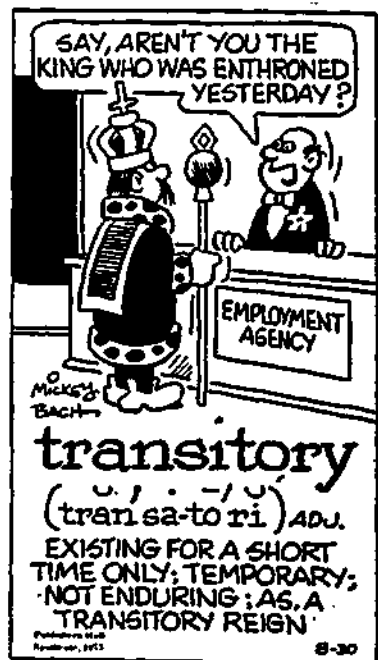

Moses to "take all heads of the people and hang them up before the Lord against the sun." Well, the daughters of Moab should have behaved themselves and not have been Biblical swingers. On the other hand, what was good enough for Charlton Heston—I mean Moses!—is good enough for me. After all, Moses combed a lot of people. Ask the Israelis! A lot of these dumbbells still think a "Redeemer" is going to come down out of the clouds and save them. So far, their only "Redeemer" has been the United States, with its gun and ammunition!

Yes, if we are to censor books, if we are to ban them, if we are to toss out the sandbags of common sense and soar away to an idiot world on a balloon of stupidity, let's do it right: let's follow the "Good Book," or else ban that mess of pornography!

Naturally the Bible will not be banned because the censors and would-be book burners are bigoted Puritans sick with the illness of smug fundamentalism, sado-masochists who love dwelling on "sin," fools who would condemn to their silly hell anyone who persists in thinking for himself and refuses to conform to their crazy spiritual dictatorship.

Business Today

by LeROY POPE

NEW YORK — It's a curious fact but New England Patriots football fans in Texas and Los Angeles Dodger baseball fans throughout the east have generated a substantial industry.

It's the athletic merchandise licensing business. Some 300 firms are engaged in it, and they must do more than $1 billion worth of business a year although no official figures are available.

The National Football League alone is known to realize more than $1 million a year in royalties on merchandise bearing the emblems of its 24 clubs — jackets, T-shirts, scarves, football uniforms for kids, caps, belts, costume jewelry, banners, plates, glasses and mugs, bicycle insignia and even dining table bibles for the tots.

THE TWO MAJOR baseball, the hockey and the basketball leagues also realize royalties divided among their clubs.

That's all money to be made by the management side of professional sports and, according to Ray Volpe of National Hockey League Services Inc., this is comparatively new as a big thing. It dates from the merger a few years ago of the National and American football leagues under the leadership of Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

There also is a substantial merchandise licensing business in behalf of the professional players' associations which uses emblems of the players' unions on the same kinds of garments and other merchandise.

Licensing Corp. of America of New York, headed by Joseph Grant, represents the baseball leagues and most professional players' associations. LCA licenses merchandise on behalf of groups of players.

Licensing merchandise bearing the signatures or portraits of star athletes and other celebrities is a century-old business. Ballplayers and stage and cinema pictures were distributed with cigarettes and candy for years. They still are tucked into bubble gum packs. But Grant said licensing on behalf of an individual star is a rarity nowadays. Group deals have taken over.

GROUPS LIKE the Beatles created bonanzas for the merchandising licensing people. So did popular fads like the Davy Crockett coonskin cap craze.

But, said the National Hockey League's Ray Volpe, the fame of individuals and interest in fads is transitory and manufacturers can be stuck overnight with worthless merchandise.

S&Ls losing savings war

by LEA TONKIN

The savings rate war, which began in July, continues to drain housing dollars from savings and loan associations (S&L's), contends Roland Barstow, president of Bell Federal Savings and Loan Association in Chicago.

Following the July 5 announcement by the Federal Reserve Board of higher allowable savings rates and a "wild card" savings category with no rate ceiling, the situation has become "almost catastrophic," Barstow says.

Some finance institutions in the Chicago area offer rates in this category as high as 8 1/4 per cent. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board's reluctance to allow higher rates is an indicator of how disastrous the new rules would be, he said.

Bell's savings losses reached record proportions, and other associations are experiencing similar losses. A serious customer relations problem was also caused by commercial banks' earlier ability to transfer savings to higher paying certificates without imposing a penalty, as S&L's are required to do by law.

SAVINGS COSTS, now approximately 5.7 per cent, will rise to 6.5 per cent in the next year, while the mortgage loan portfolio will increase slowly from its present 7 per cent base, Barstow said.

Most lenders increased their mortgage costs to the legal limit of 8 per cent weeks ago. A number of institutions in the Northwest Suburbs report curtailed lending to home buyers.

The upshot of this money crunch, along with increasing costs of new construction, will be a slump in the new and existing home market for the coming months. A way out could be Congressional action to curtail Reserve Board rate control, or the removal of state usury ceilings.

Zenith Radio Corp.

The board of directors of Zenith Radio Corp. declared a quarterly dividend of 38 cents. The dividend will be payable on Sept. 29 to stockholders of record as of Sept. 7.

Sacred Heart begins school with four teacher sessions

Teachers began classes at Sacred Heart of Mary High School in Rolling Meadows this week following four days of teacher workshops.

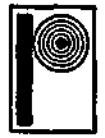

The teacher workshops were designed to help teachers recognize and meet the needs of students on an individual basis. The teachers learned about the community and its resources, practiced communication skills and were introduced to a new advisory system. The workshop sessions will be continued throughout the school year.

The workshops included a panel discussion on "youth problems and community issues of concern," tours of Harper Junior College and Arlington Heights Library for new teachers and a workshop on improving teachers' communication skills.

"OUR MAIN focus this year will be to improve communication between students and teachers," said Jim Marx, associate principal. "We want the teachers to be able to work more effectively with students individually as well as in small groups."

A major step in this direction will be a new advisor system in which students will meet with an advisor of their choice at least once every two weeks, said Marx. The advisor will discuss not only the students' classes but also how the students can best use free time to work on individual projects.

Homefinders, Realtors is one of the northwest suburban area's Cinderella stories! From its founding date, June 15, 1967, Homefinders has risen from the ashes of obscurity to one of the best known names in real estate in northwest Chicagoland.

Bob Zaun, president of Homefinders, said, "It would be easy to give a lot of facts and figures which point out our success and growth, but statistics are terribly boring to almost everybody. Instead, we like to talk about some of the out-of-the-ordinary services Homefinders offers and some of the more unusual fun things we do.

"Business people have been accused of lacking a sense of humor, being only out for the sale. Not so at Homefinders! Certainly our primary interest is in doing a professional job for our clients, but I am also concerned about making it fun to do. It is our intention to have a happy and enthusiastic, as well as a well educated, staff. Toward this end we try to mix a little pleasure with business."

Homefinders has always had a flair for the unusual — from the surprise appearance of the Harper College cheerleaders at a company breakfast meeting — to the acquisition of ERA. ERA (Electronic Realty Associates) is a totally new concept in marketing homes nationwide.

Only through Homefinders can clients sit at their kitchen table and go house hunting coast to coast through a Homefinding Wire Photo Machine. Likewise, only at Homefinders can a seller market his home nationwide via the same network.

235 N. Northwest Hwy., Palatine

In a lighter vein, "unusual" is a kind term for the zany stage productions put on at the annual Christmas party by the Mighty Homefinders Art Players. This year's production will be — a musical!

The Homefinders Sales Training Program is also somewhat unusual. "It is an absolute requirement for all new associates regardless of prior real estate experience," said Zaun. "We delve into subjects like salesmanship, appraisal, financing and even income tax problems during this intensive two-week program. Our special seminars on Creative Financing are becoming increasingly more important as mortgage money becomes less available."

Homefinders is constantly changing, either to keep pace with or further ignite its rapid growth. A few months ago the company acquired facsimile machines which provide the salespeople with instant information on new listings from all seven offices. A licensed real estate broker, experienced in marketing residential property, now heads the advertising department.

And most recently Homefinders created a SCAT (Special Creative Assignment) Team. This is a select group of people specializing in developing and market testing new ideas.

The services Homefinders provides in addition to its residential division include commercial-investment counseling, property management, new construction and executive relocation. The firm is also a member of three multiple listing services blanketing an area from Mount Prospect west past Elgin and from Roselle north to the Chain of Lakes.

Although Homefinders, Realtors may be a Cinderella story, whatever success it has enjoyed has not come from Fairy Godmothers with magic wands. On the contrary, it has been many hard-working people working many long hours, but every minute of it has been fun . . . well, almost!

Clients have an easy time house hunting or selling with Homefinders' ERA machine which flashes photo listings among a nationwide network of Realtors. Here, the machine is demonstrated by Bob Zaun (left), President of the firm, and Jan Behrens, Secretary-Treasurer.

These home finders know that — HOMEFINDERS is great to work for!
We know you will find them great to work with! They may not have a glass slipper to fit Cinderella, but they do have the home to fit your every need.
Let them help you live happily ever after!

Windings Villas townhouses started near St. Charles

Construction is under way on phase one of The Windings Villas, three four-unit townhouses being developed by Idlehour Development Co., division of Selleg Stevens Peterson & Flock, Inc. of St. Charles, according to Don Flock, partner-in-charge of SSPF ventures.

The Windings Villas will be a secluded cluster of townhouses situated at The Windings of Ferson Creek just west of St. Charles, a land development of The Branigan Organization, Inc. of Oak Brook, who is providing exclusive marketing responsibilities. The Windings Villas, to eventually include 32 units, is an estimated $1.5 million development.

Two model townhouses are expected to open early October with completion of the first 12 units planned for January, 1974. A two-bedroom ranch (1,012 square feet) and a two-story two-bedroom with den (1,480 square feet) in the $43-48,000 price range are the two types of phase one units available.

As Chicago's population has moved westward, opening an untapped multi-family housing market, the Fox River Valley's country lifestyle has become increasingly popular, said Dick Selleg, partner-in-charge of SSPF planning.

"WE FEEL WE ARE leading the movement westward in putting multi-family housing (townhouses concept) in the country," said Flock. "The St. Charles area is experiencing a phenomenal growth pattern and we believe there is a market for the person who wants the amenities of a townhouse in the country," added Flock.

The Windings Villas, a planned unit development, is "highly geared toward the preservation of the Fox River Valley's natural country amenities." Thirty-seven acres of preserved woods in a "greenway"/trails system of sloping hills and green trees capture the Valley's beauty and tranquility.

Each townhouse will include such features as air-conditioning, two-car garage, wall-to-wall carpeting, woodburning fireplace, full basement, dishwasher, oven and range, disposal, soundproof walls, and insulated patio doors.

Enhancing the villas' exterior will be privately fenced entry courts, landscaped grounds, redwood courtyard decks and a complete maintenance-free program.

With an emphasis on a "heavy" country mood, SSPF decided on a rough sawn cedar trim, massive chimneys, native stone walls, and soft blending colors.

All phase one units will be total electric. "We like the safety and cleanliness provided by a total electric home," Flock said.

GREENHOUSE will be on a model, as an optional item.

Recreational facilities include a 30' x 50' swimming pool, recreational/social center, tennis courts, and 37-acre "greenway."

The Windings Villas is the first venture of the newly-created Idlehour Development Co., division of SSPF, formed in 1964. SSPF is a land planner, architect, and interior and landscape architect, and has provided these services for the townhouse development.

Selleg explains the reason for Idlehour's formation. "We wanted to expand our expertise in the housing industry beyond the land planning/design phase. We wanted an opportunity to gain a broader base, as designer and developer."

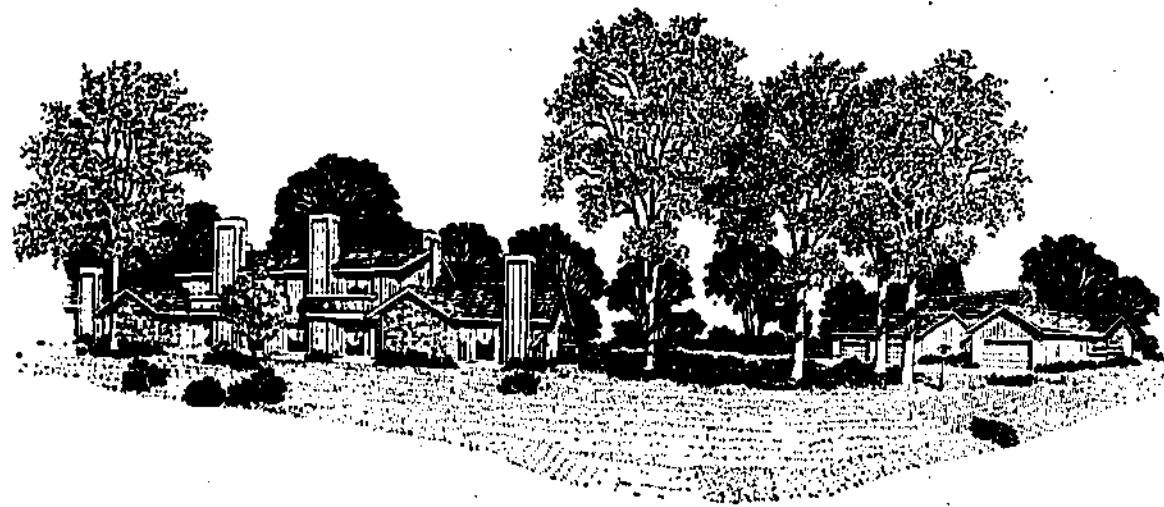

SSPF has done land planning and designed single-family and multi-family units for many major Chicago-area housing developers and is the recipient of numerous design awards from the Home Builders Association of Chicagoland, National Association of Home Builders, and Better Homes and Garden magazine. Developments include Prestbury, Aurora; Pepper Valley, Geneva; Fox Chase, St. Charles; Acacia, Indian Head Park; and The Trails, Roselle.

Selleg calls SSPF a firm concerned "with the problems of total environmental planning."

"We're not designing and building a lot of units, just a few to maintain a country atmosphere reflected throughout the Fox River Valley," Flock said. The Windings of Ferson Creek, designed for primary housing, has an overall low density figure of two units per acre.

To visit The Windings Villas or The Windings of Ferson Creek drive west on Route 64 (North Avenue) through St. Charles or Route 38 (Roosevelt Road) through Geneva and turn right at Route 47. Take Route 47 north one-half mile to Empire Road, turn right one mile to The Windings.

Markay moderates RELO discussion

John L. Markay, partner in Gladstone, Realtors, was moderator for a panel discussion, "Sales Associate Techniques for More Listings, Referrals, and Sales through RELO," at a mid-year meeting of RELO/Inter-City Relocation Service recently in Denver.

Ed Hall, manager of the Villa Park office of Gladstone, Realtors, and Diane Kowalski of the Des Plaines office attended the meeting. The firm is also in Franklin Park, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village and Berkeley.

RELO is the nation's leading real estate referral organization and covers more than 7,000 residential real estate markets, including all major cities and their suburbs as well as many small towns and cities.

Gladstone has been successful in the program — the firm has tripled the number of referrals in comparison to its 1972 figures. ICRS members assist transferred executives and others relocating in new communities by marketing their former residents and referring their housing and lifestyle needs to members at destination. The program enables destination brokers to complete house-hunting preliminaries in advance of transferred families' first visits to their new cities.

Starck names its winners

Winners of the salesman-of-the-month award in the five offices of Robert W. Starck & Co., Realtors were announced in a recent company publication. Awards are based on the best combinations of listings, sales and listings sold.

As will often happen, sales associates will have equal records, and there was a three-way tie in the Arlington Heights office for July. Leading sales there were Lorraine Glasby, Dorothy Bogdas and William Murphy.

In Mount Prospect, Lois Anderson, sales manager, was the top salesperson for the month. The Schaumburg office named Sue Jordan as the winner, while in Hoffman Estates top honors went to Bill Cowin, sales manager. Carol Schaub was top sales associate in the Palatine

Firm leases Volvo building

Donald Mizock of Podolsky and Associates, Chicago-based industrial real estate specialists, has announced the leasing by Chapman Performance Products Inc., of the 27,670-square-foot building at 1505 Birchwood, Des Plaines.

The facility, formerly occupied by Volvo Midwest Inc., will be used by Chapman as their main corporate headquarters. Chapman will also move their manufacturing process from their former facility at 5567 N. Elston into the Des Plaines building.

Chapman, developers of the Chapman Kar-lok, automotive security device, also manufactures their proof locking devices for motorcycles and bicycles. In addition to their product line, they also specialize in high performance automotive service and set-up.

Volvo was represented in the lease negotiations by Daniel Sokolowski of Nardi & Co. The total consideration involved was in excess of $400,000.

In other related transactions, Podolsky and Associates has subsequently leased approximately 4,000 square feet of Chapman's former Elston Avenue building to Universal Manufacturing Company. The remaining 5,000 square feet of space is currently available for lease.

Daniel J. O'Neill, vice president, Podolsky and Associates, represented Volvo in the purchase of the 60,000 square foot "STP" building on Oakton Street in Des Plaines. Volvo's move from 1505 Birchwood, Des Plaines, made it possible for Chapman Performance Products to relocate their operation to accommodate their expanded product line.

Aldridge model nominated for Design '73 honors

The Biarritz, a new model built by the Homes by Aldridge Co. in Palatine's Versailles subdivision, has been nominated for the Design '73 Award of the Home Builders Association.

The Biarritz and three other basic models in Versailles are architectural creations of architect Martin Henry Braun, A.I.A.

The Biarritz is a traditional all brick house on a single level, with four bedrooms and two baths.

With the average size of houses across the country at 1,724 square feet, the Biarritz with its over 2,300 square feet is a living-space bonanza.

THERE IS room enough to create a separate wing for the four bedrooms with their own special hall, entered from the foyer. The master bedroom and bath are at the rear of the house for even more privacy. So are the 22 foot living room and the adjoining dining room.

The kitchen is entered between the dining room and the family room, a big 18-foot two inches. It has built-in cabinets, eye-level double oven and range, dishwasher and disposer, vinyl asbestos floor, stainless or colored double sink with virtually every style and color of laminate top available.

The laundry room is adjacent.

The 20 foot family room has Bruce Ranch plank or fireside floor and fully paneled walls. There is an optional fireplace.

There is a choice of colored fixtures for bathrooms, cultured marble or plastic laminate vanity tops. Moen mixing faucets are standard. Included in the purchase of each house is a two car garage, black-topped driveway, and a fully graded and seeded lot. Lots are estate sized, up to a half acre.

Fully carpeted or all oak floors are available at no extra cost.

The Biarritz will be judged by a team of judges from three organizations: the American Institute of Architects, Chicago Chapter; the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs; and builder members of the Home Builders Association of Chicago. The latter will, of course, be excluded from judging any of their own entries.

Yes, we can get Mortgage Money for our Buyers!

Buyers, sellers need professionals

The creeping crunch in the mortgage market hasn't had much impact on home sales as yet, but when it does a lot of sellers and buyers will be seeking aid from the professional real estate broker.

That's the observation of one of Chicago's leading real estate authorities, Robert G. Walters, vice president and general sales manager, residential division, Baird & Warner, Inc. The company has been in operation for 118 years and now has 30 sales offices in the city and suburban locations.

"There is usually a lag of 30 to 45 days until a mortgage credit crunch affects the sale of existing homes. The drain on the money supply and the resulting increase in the cost of credit (where money is available) hasn't caused us any grief yet," said Walters. "It's simply a reality of this business that it takes a while for us to respond to changes that take place in the mortgage market, either up or down."

Walters continued, "Most commitments presently in our file are from the last 30 to 60 days. Therefore, the effects will be felt in another 30 days. The properties most affected will be those now on the market or sales pending subject to a mortgage commitment."

To support this observation, Walters noted that while there is widespread alarm about tight money and recent interest rate increases, Baird & Warner had "an outstanding month" with the sale of 345 residential properties valued at $17,481,839. Combined with the sale of nonresidential properties, production was up 18 per cent for the month and dollar volume was up 32 per cent, compared with July, 1972.

"AS SOON AS the shock wave of the tightening mortgage market reaches people trying to buy and sell homes, a lot of them are going to re-discover the virtue of working with a real estate broker," Walters said.

When mortgage money is plentiful at attractive rates and lenders are all but falling over themselves to make loans, he said, people are tempted to go it alone in the market and do their own wheeling and dealing without benefit of a real estate broker.

"But when the mortgage market tightens up, the professional broker is quickly rediscovered not simply as a property middleman but as a key to financing transactions. After all, an agreement between buyer and seller is meaningless unless the transaction can be financed," said Walters.

He believes that the nonprofessional is at a disadvantage in a tight mortgage market and he also pointed out that there are several financing options available that many people don't even know about. "It's really unfortunate when a sale falls through because a buyer can't secure financing and doesn't know about available alternatives," Walters pointed out.

He explained why real estate professionals are in a better position to secure financing.

"FIRST, WE HAVE been in business for many years and we've established our credentials with a large number of lending sources. We have more than a good reputation working in our favor. Contrasted with the individual mortgage applicant, the large real estate firm like Baird & Warner is a major customer. The steady quantity and quality of business we generate does give preferential consideration for loans with many institutions."

Walters said that as a result of its RESET program (Real Estate Service for Employee Transfers) Baird & Warner has a number of major corporations and their employees as clientele. This opens financial channels not available to many brokers.

"At least half of all the sales by our company are affected one way or another by a job transfer. Corporations are sensitive to the needs of their employees, whether they are buying or selling. In a tight mortgage market, companies can intercede in two ways.

"For one, these companies have their own banking connections and as major clients of banks they can be influential in securing loans that will make it possible for their employees to complete a buying or selling transaction," Walters noted.

MOST CORPORATIONS also have "moving and living plans." This means that, when an executive is being transferred, his employer wants it done with a minimum of stress or strain, and this often involves assistance in many different ways.

"Baird & Warner, a Realtor, is in a superior position to know where such buyers or sellers may be. And of course, our clients, whether they are selling or buying, benefit from that intelligence," he said.

Walters said there are financing options that are worth looking into, particularly in some communities where mortgages simply are not available and corporate support can't be drawn upon.

One is a purchase through "articles of agreement for a warranty deed" — sometimes referred to as a contract purchase. "But there has been so much stigma attached to this legitimate way to complete a sale that many people won't consider it, and many transactions have failed because of it," Walters said.

In this type of transaction the seller agrees to take a small or large down payment from the buyer together with specific monthly payments. The seller keeps the deed until a certain number of payments have been made. "This avenue can be ideal for the buyer who can easily afford the monthly payments but has not saved enough for the down payment he would need to secure a mortgage loan from a savings and loan association or bank. It's perfectly legal and legitimate and could save many deals if both parties agree to the terms."

Another financing technique is known as a "purchase money mortgage." Here, the seller agrees to take back the mortgage itself using the property as security on the purchase money mortgage. The seller accepts a down payment from the buyer and monthly payments of principal and interest on the outstanding purchase money mortgage. Title passes to the purchaser subject to the purchase money mortgage at the agreed time of closing.

"Finally, an arrangement can sometimes be made for the buyer to assume the mortgage, where possible, this is beneficial to both parties. Often the buyer may take over an existing mortgage at a lower rate of interest than the current market and may save the expense of arranging a new loan. It also makes it possible for the seller to go through with a deal to a qualified buyer," said Walters.

He pointed out, however, that mortgage assumptions can be complicated and that a lawyer should be consulted when financing alternatives are being explored. The real estate broker generally knows which lenders will permit assumptions.

Apartment info center opened in Mt. Prospect Relocation Consultants Inc. of Chicago has announced the opening of its third apartment information center at 530 W. Northwest Hwy. in Mount Prospect. The center will offer a free apartment finding service for the public, realty firms, and Chicago industries seeking to relocate transferred employees.

According to Tom Atkinson, co-owner, the service is sponsored by the apartment owners throughout Chicago and the suburbs. Apartment managers supply the center with floor plans, photos, community conveniences, and other detailed information pertinent to their rentals, which range from $170. Counselors from the firm also regularly visit listed properties to verify owner information and keep abreast of changes.

Atkinson said that the principal service of the firm is to save apartment hunters time and effort. "In 30 minutes, we can describe several communities and various alternatives to choose from. The choice can then be narrowed down to three or four apartment locations.

"The problem is not availability, but the wide range of apartment styles, rents, and locations to choose from," said Atkinson. "Renters look for certain facilities and homes where they will be compatible with their neighbors. Apartment managers also have their preferences. Some want to attract families, some singles, and others prefer executives."

Atkinson and his associate, Tom Swanson, operate other apartment information centers at 679 W. North Ave., Elmhurst, and 119 E. Ogden, Hinsdale. They also publish The Apartment Directory-Chicago and Suburbs which is a guide to apartments, condominiums, and townhomes.

CHECK AND CALK PROBLEM SPOTS WHEN YOU FEEL IT'S NEEDED

Do-It-Yourself

One of the cheapest and most effective methods of protecting your home from moisture, rot and drafts is caulking it.

Caulking compound is inexpensive and you need no particular skill to apply it. The problems that would result without caulking would be far more expensive and difficult to cure.

You can caulk any time you like so long as the temperature is above 40 degrees. The ideal time is before painting. In fact, caulking is a must before you paint. All new construction should be caulked.

But there are in-between times for caulking and you should do it whenever you feel it is needed.

Caulking compound is a substance not unlike putty. It is more pliable than putty however and it is used to seal cracks and joints. While caulking lasts a long time, it should be checked now and then and replaced in spots where it has dried out or shrunk and a gap is once more open.

APPLY CAULKING around window and door frames, between window sill and siding, between siding and vertical corner boards, between the siding and the top of the foundation, between steps and porch, doorsill and doorstep, between chimney and roof.

Fill every joint you can find anywhere in your house that might be exposed to the weather.

Caulking compound is available in inexpensive cartridges which slip into a caulking gun for easy application. The cartridge has a plastic nozzle. The tip of this is cut and a steady pull on the trigger of the caulking gun forces out a thin stream of caulking.

Keep a steady pressure on the trigger to insure an unbroken stream. Keep the gun moving so that the bead of caulking doesn't tend to pile up. Make certain the opening is completely covered.

4th townhome unit opened in Tanglewood Village area

Larwin-Illinois, Inc. recently announced the opening of the fourth townhome unit in its Tanglewood Village at Greenbrook Country in DuPage County.

"More than 300 townhomes have been sold and occupied in Tanglewood I through III since late 1971," said Terry T. Bickel, regional director of marketing for Larwin's single family division, "and we plan an additional 91 townhomes for the new Tanglewood IV."

Bickel pointed out that the Greenbrook community offers many recreational amenities and a state-licensed, cooperative nursery school with professional teachers.

California-style spaciousness is emphasized in the Tanglewood townhomes, priced from $27,990 to $36,490. Included are carpeting in all bedrooms, living rooms and dining rooms, double oven and range, dishwasher, food waste disposal and private fenced patios.

Individual townhomes have two to four bedrooms and up to two and a half baths. Three of the five models feature exclusive Spacemaster adaptability, enabling families to convert one of the bedrooms into a den-library, dining room or family room. This versatility, Bickel said, has proved popular with smaller families.

THE TWO-STORY MIRAMER (Plan 041) features a raised entry and dramatic step-down living room, an elegant master bedroom suite with double-door entry, a private bath and large walk-in closet and balcony. There are two other bedrooms and a second bath upstairs, plus a powder room on the first floor. Both the spacious kitchen and family room afford garden views.

The three-bedroom Tiburon (Plan 021), with broad expanses of windows, brings the garden into both the family room and living room. The kitchen is graced with a convenient breakfast bar. The third bedroom may be ordered as a formal dining room with a dry bar.

The two-story San Marino (Plan 031) is designed with the option of converting the third bedroom into a den-library combination on the second floor. It features a double-door entry into the master bedroom, and both the formal dining room and garden view living room create a feeling of openness.

The two-bedroom, one-bath Ventura (Plan 011) is designed with a formal dining room with the option to convert it into a family room, and the second bedroom may be ordered as a den-library, with or without a wet bar.

The two-story, three-bath Capri (Plan 061) embraces four bedrooms on the second floor, including a master suite with its own bath. Entry to the townhome is separate from the large living room, and there is a formal dining room plus a garden view family room. The kitchen is complete with a pantry and breakfast area.

TANGLEWOOD residents may take advantage of free professional interior decorating consultation, as offered in the Larwin Home Center located in Greenbrook Country. The home center, under the direction of Douglas Cook, displays a full line of furnishings and appliances, many of them exclusive Larwin offerings.

The lifestyle at Tanglewood goes beyond the family townhome into the greenbelt walk and play areas protected from through traffic.

Recreational facilities abound. There is Club Tanglewood, complete with swimming pools, children's wading pools, barbecue area, putting green and courts for shuffleboard, volleyball and badminton, plus a game room and cabana.

Tanglewood also offers a closed circuit, two-channel television system which monitors the swimming pool and club house areas so that mothers may observe their children at play from inside the home. A master TV antenna system is connected to all of the townhomes.

Townhome owners have automatic membership in the Tanglewood Home-owners Association, managed by a professional association management company.

"One of the reasons Tanglewood has been so successful," said Bickel, "is that we employ a full-time recreation director, life guards, swim coaches and others to help resident members with swim lessons, water polo, golf tournaments, softball for ladies, exercise classes, couples bridge, volleyball and other social-recreational activities."

TANGLEWOOD IV furnished models are now open to the public, featuring designs by Environmental Concepts, Inc. of Beverly Hills, Calif.

Tanglewood is the third village in the 1,000-acre Greenbrook community, located in the rolling hills country off Lake Street (U.S. Route 20), just east of Barrington Road in DuPage County. The single-family homes of Tempo and Trend Villages are in the same general area.

The Greenbrook Country community is being developed by the Illinois Region of The Larwin Group, Inc., of Beverly Hills, Calif. Larwin is a subsidiary of CNA Financial Corp.

Tucson getting 'World's tallest, smallest' building

by BRUCE A. SMITH

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI)—Construction on what may be the world's "tallest, smallest" building is scheduled to begin next month where the former home of a son of millionaire J. P. Morgan now stands.

The Diplomat Towers — which has been termed the "Skinny Skyscraper" or a "26-story pillar with windows" — will be 200 feet high and 50 feet across at its widest point.

At its narrowest point, the building will be more than 11 times higher than it is wide.

Ivan A. Sarkiss, head of an architectural firm that bears his name, is the tower's designer.

"I don't know of any building that is so tall and yet so small," said the 69-year-old, Armenian — born Sarkiss. "I began in this business 30 years ago and there is no question that this is the building with the proportions in the United States."

WHY WOULD anyone build a 26-story office and apartment building in an area the size of a basketball court?

"We designed the building for the site rather than finding a site for the building," said project manager Jack S. Townsend. Townsend said the planning took more than two years.

The tower will have nearly a complete circle of glass clinging to one side of a concrete section, which looks like a neon light set on end or a stack of poker chips. Each floor will contain about 1,400 square feet of tenant space, roughly equivalent to a small home.

The high-rise is to soar upwards from a small plot of ground in the downtown section that has a street frontage of only 18 feet.

It will be set in an L-shaped pocket formed by an existing nine-story structure. The 75-year-old, one-story home now on the site will be torn down. It had been the office of Sarkiss and his staff.

Diplomat Towers Inc., of Marina Del Ray, Calif., is the developer of the $1.5 million venture.

New manager feels at home

"It's like old home week" says Robert E. Koelper of 1947 E. Elmwood Cr., Arlington Heights, of his new assignment as manager, central office maintenance, in Illinois Bell's installations in Skokie and Morton Grove.

Koelper was a central office foreman in Skokie in 1965 and some of the persons working for him then, are working for him now — many of them having been promoted in the past eight years. Koelper's latest promotion was effective July 1, and puts him in charge of central office equipment in both communities.

A native of Mount Prospect, Koelper joined the company in 1948 and has served in various plant and switching positions in the company's north area operations.

He and his wife, Nancy, have two children: David, 15 and Barbara, 13. Mrs. Koelper worked for Illinois Bell at one time, as an operator, in Highland Park.

A 1948 graduate of Northbrook High School, Koelper has been active in Little League, Boys Football and Boy Scouts.

Realty investment trusts finance homes

Real estate investment trusts (REIT) will gain new opportunities to increase both the quantity and quality of their investments during the next 12 to 18 months.

"While the real estate industry will experience a slowdown — a trend likely to continue through most of 1974 — the overall effect on the REIT industry should be favorable," says Durand A. Holladay, managing trustee of Continental Mortgage Investors, Boston.

"In tight money conditions, commercial banks generally withdraw from the real estate sector. And when they do not make funds available for real estate development, additional opportunities are created for real estate trusts — both in increased volume of investments and in better quality investments," Holladay observes in a recent report to stockholders.

While some REITs will find it difficult to raise new capital and meet the higher costs, he points out that new plans are now being developed which make it possible for CMI to raise additional funds necessary for continued growth and also to take advantage of new investment opportunities. "Continental's commercial bank line of credit has been increased to $309 million."

HOLLADAY NOTES that "the trust's adviser has adopted a nationwide correspondent system for loan originations through mortgage bankers and brokers. This change should have significant benefits for CMI.

"The correspondent system went into use April 1, 1973, and in the three months ended June 30, 1973, provided Continental with loans totaling $138 million — $74 million more than was originated in the same quarter a year ago," Holladay reports.

All CMI loans are now being made with interest rates tied to the higher of the prime rate or the 90-day commercial paper rate. He emphasizes that this was "a direct result of the continued sharp rise in recent months of both prime and commercial paper rates.

"In the past, interest rates on loans made by CMI have been tied to the prime rate, while short-term borrowings were actually a function of the commercial paper market rate."

While CMI experienced solid growth in total assets and investments during the fiscal year ended March 31, 1973, the trust's earnings were substantially unchanged from the previous year.

"This can be attributed to unusual money market conditions during which interest expense rose more sharply than gross income," Holladay states.

THESE UNUSUAL economic conditions, he adds, are expected to continue with higher short-term money costs anticipated and fewer funds available from commercial banks for real estate development.

"We believe that the spread between interest income and expense for REITs has reached its bottom and will return to more normal levels by year end. As normal profit margins return, our investment portfolio growth will provide the impetus for increased earnings.

"While the economic situation has had — and is still having — a most profound effect on CMI's earnings, we expect relief from these conditions by the opening months of 1974 — and, concomitantly, increased earnings," Holladay concluded.

Home ownership cost hard to figure

Homowners will tell you there's no way to predict the full and true costs of home ownership.

That doesn't alter the fact that you must make such calculations before you begin househunting.

"Unless you estimate what you can afford you're simply wasting time," suggests Jack Brown, sales manager of the Baird & Warner, Inc., Elmhurst office, 446 N. York Rd.

"After all, what you can afford will strongly influence both where you can live and what kind of house you can buy," he added.

He questions the usual rules-of-thumb approaches like "buy a home that is 2½ times your annual earnings" or "allocate 25 per cent of your monthly income to housing."

What really counts is how much of a downpayment you can produce and how much you can afford monthly for housing, including not just principal and interest on the mortgage but also property taxes, insurance, utilities, heat, maintenance, and repairs.

It's this combination - your downpayment and the size of the mortgage your income permits you to pay each month - that determines how much house you can afford to buy.

"You should have no problem calculating the downpayment. You have it or you don't," he observed. "One thing to watch for, particularly if you're going to draw upon savings it's taken years to put together, is not to put your last dime into a downpayment. One of the functions of savings is to protect your family in case of emergency. It doesn't make sense to leave them unprotected while you buy the most house that is mathematically possible. There will also be some fees and closing costs that could run hundreds of dollars which you also have to figure as part of your downpayment."

CALCULATING YOUR monthly mortgage cost, the second factor in the equation, may be more complicated. But there are ways to make some reasonable guesses.

"The simplest way to figure out how much you have available for housing is to determine your average monthly net income and subtract your average monthly expenses for other items," he suggests.

Net income is the amount you have left after payment of taxes and other deductions. It's your actual take-home pay. The "other expenses" you have to subtract to know how much is left for housing include food, transportation, insurance premiums, health care, recreation, savings, clothing, installment payments, auto expenses, contributions and gifts, taxes you pay directly and miscellaneous items.

"The difference between the two figures indicates what you have available for monthly housing expenses," said the Baird & Warner executive.

It's important to know how large a mortgage you can handle safely plus the related expenses of operating a home.

The chart below shows what you have to pay in principal and interest every month for each $1,000 you borrow at different rates of interest and repayment figures.

Years to Pay	7%	7½%	7¾%	8%
15 years	$8.99	$9.28	$9.42	$9.56
20 years	7.76	8.06	8.21	8.37
25 years	7.07	7.39	7.56	7.72
30 years	6.66	7.00	7.17	7.34

Here's how you can use the chart to calculate how large a mortgage you can carry and, to some extent, how much house you can buy.

First, by using the calculation described above, assume that you estimate that you have $250 a month available for housing.

Second, by calling a real estate broker or a couple of savings and loan associations you can get a pretty good idea of what current mortgage rates and terms are.

Suppose that the best you can do is obtain a loan at 7¼% interest with 25 years to repay. The chart shows that this type of loan will cost you $7.56 per month for each $1,000 you borrow. If you divide the $250 you have available by $7.56 you'll find the answer is a little over 33 times $1,000 or a loan of about $33,000.

CHANCES ARE that to get a loan at those terms in a tightening mortgage market you'll have to come up with a 20 per cent downpayment. This means that your $33,000 loan represents 80 per cent, or 4/5 the house cost. The remaining fifth, or your downpayment, is $8,250. So the house price you can afford is $41,250.

But, as the Baird & Warner executive noted earlier, housing expenses include taxes, maintenance, insurance, and so on. How can you predict how much that comes to, and whether you can afford it without jeopardizing your savings reserves?

The Baird & Warner spokesman suggested that a general guideline "that simply indicates an average expense range" is to figure about 1 per cent of the amount of your mortgage as your actual monthly cost.

In this case, that comes to $330. Obviously if your budget limit is $250 it would not be advisable to buy a $41,000 house.

When you are considering a specific home the present owner will be able to provide reliable estimates or actual figures for your other housing expenses.

Also, your real estate broker or savings and loan officer will assist you in determining costs and your ability to pay.

"There are so many variables you must really investigate your own specific circumstances. If you're up to the hilt in installment payments now or have other unusual financial obligations your ability to pay for housing may be below average," said the Baird & Warner officer. "On the other hand, if the house is unlikely to need repairs or very much maintenance and if you're handy you might be in a better than average position. But figuring out what you can pay should be one of your first househunting steps."

ADMISSIONS bottleneck, which keeps hospital patients waiting and delays the start of treatment, may be eased through the use of a new computerized system introduced by an Elk Grove Village firm. The Admi-Tron system, offered by Genetron, Inc., can store information given over the telephone.

This allows pre-admission. Data can be retrieved, verified and entered into the hospital system when a patient arrives. The basic system can be expanded for any number of admitting locations, says Genetron President Eugene A. Stankis. Information can be stored and retrieved for outpatient department and clinic use.

UOP'S PROCESS Division has licensed four major process units and has been awarded the process engineering designs for a multimillion dollar refinery expansion in Colombia. Empresa Colombiana de Petroleo (Ecopetrol) will add the units to expand its refinery at Barrancabermeja, already the largest in Colombia. The signing ceremony was recently concluded at the Division's Des Plaines offices in the presence of representatives of Instituto Mexicano del Petroleo (IMP), developers of one of the processes (Demex) that Ecopetrol will use.

The refinery will have greater capacity for producing gasoline at the expense of heavy fuels as a consequence of this expansion.

At Turnberry, you don't have to give up your children, your dog, your "elbow room" or your individuality to live on a golf course.

Why trap your family in one of those model apartment units? No room for the children. No room for the dog. Confining look-alike apartments with no individual character. That's simply too big a price to pay.

At Turnberry, you can have your golf course and still enjoy the graciousness, spaciousness and individuality found only in single family home living. We have a private championship golf course and a magnificent French Norman Clubhouse plus breathtaking views from spacious homesites where each house is custom-designed so no two homes are alike. And, while you're playing golf, there are many exciting things for your family to do. Fish and sail on our three beautiful lakes. Swim in our Olympic-size pool. Play tennis on our tournament-quality courts. Or hike and bike through our hills, valleys and woods.

is no problem. Air-conditioned North Western trains are just 10 minutes away at suburban Crystal Lake. And you can drive to O'Hare or any place in Chicagoland on nearby expressways.

There are no ordinary homesites at Turnberry. Here, the crest of a hill, a lush green fairway, a beautiful lake or century-old trees adjoin the living room of your custom-built home. Architectural approval is required for every house built here. The size and cost is not as important as architectural excellence.

Homesites average 3/4 of an acre, and more important, have a minimum width of 150 feet at the building line. All sites are fully improved with winding paved roads, water, sewer and underground utilities. Prices range from $18,000 to $35,000.

Elk Grove Midgets first; league sign-up next week

The Elk Grove Village hockey Midgets defeated the Oak Brook Blues 4-1 to take a two-point lead over Oak Brook with one game remaining in the Oak Brook Summer League.

Bill Halfpenny and Joe Danca did all of Elk Grove's scoring, Halfpenny getting the first two goals and Danca the last two. Assists were by Mark Rodseth (two), Gary Pratchard, Mike Walsh and Jack McLoraine.

Goalie Steve Cimino was brilliant in the nets again and defensemen Bob Brunn, Rob Goeske, Mark Gustafson and Walsh broke up most of Oak Brook's offensive efforts.

The Elk Grove Village Amateur Hockey Association will have its evaluation period at the Woodfield Hockey Center this Tuesday through Saturday, Sept. 4-8. Schedule is the following: Bantams Tuesday at 7 p.m., Midgets Tuesday at 8 p.m., Juveniles Tuesday at 9 p.m., Mites Thursday at 7:30 p.m., Squirts Saturday at 9:30 a.m. and Pee Wees Saturday at 8:30 a.m.

All boys who have not yet turned in registration forms should bring them to the rink at this time with full equipment. Anyone without a registration form who would like to register should arrive an hour before scheduled ice time with parents and equipment.

Zikes cashes at Waukegan

Les Zikes, manager of Beverly Lanes in Arlington Heights and a member of the Professional Bowlers Association tour, cashed for $1,100 in the recent Greater Chicago area tournament in Waukegan.

Zikes picked up $1,050 by finishing 15th in the tourney won by Marty Piraino of Syracuse and added an additional $50 by cashing in the Pro-Am competition.

The Palatine resident won this same tournament in 1969 to qualify for the $125,000 Firestone Tournament of Champions. Les averaged 210 for the week as compared to the 220 posted by Piraino who fired a 299 in the championship match for the top prize of $8,000.

The PBA's summer tour winds up this week at the $70,000 Home Box Office PBA National Championship at Hillander Bowling Palace in Oklahoma City, Okla.

Two-ball tourney played at Hilldale

With weather cooperating and course conditions at a peak, the first annual Mixed Two-Ball Invitational Golf Tourney was held Sunday at Hilldale Country Club in Hoffman Estates.

Format for the opening year's play allowed each member of the mixed teams to hit shots from the tee, then after choosing a drive, alternate shots from that point into the cup.

Low gross winners of the inaugural event were Marie Blum and Tom Craft with a nine-hole 38. Runners-up in the gross division were Cynthia Bradley and Herb Blum. Low net score went to Brian Nolan and Chris Mahon with a 34.

Several other prizes were awarded throughout the day. High score went to Mary Jane Jelden and Robert Bradley while most putts was taken by Bruce Mahon and Carol Craft.

Cruising through college

'Round the world on a floating campus

by ELEANOR RIVES

Dakar, Mombasa, Keelung, Casablanca, Luanda . . . far-away places, strange-sounding names, and a thousand dreams away. Dixie Whiting of 502 S. See Gwun, Mount Prospect, turned dreams into reality when she visited those exotic ports in person.

Dixie danced on stage to Berber music in Casablanca.

She got her first glimpse of a traditional native Wolof village outside Dakar, Senegal.

She camped overnight on the tip of the Cape of Good Hope.

She joined a friendly Indian family as they picnicked on rice balls and meat in a small village in India.

She barely missed being charged by an irate elephant on a safari in Kenya, when her van ventured too close.

SHE SLEPT ON mats in a Tokyo hotel, gazed in awe at the Taj Mahal in India, rejoiced at the splendor of sunrise in the Atlantic, and delighted in the occasional trail of frolicking dolphins following the ship.

At King Neptune's bidding, she crawled through a tunnel of garbage to kiss his foot as she crossed the equator for the first time.

What Dixie experienced at 21 years of age, most people do not experience in a lifetime.

In a spirit of adventure, she applied last October for World Campus Afloat, a four-month college semester on board ship traveling 'round the world. Administered by Chapman College, Orange, Calif., World Campus Afloat offers fully accredited college courses relating to the cultures and countries visited.

IT WAS A thrilled University of Illinois coed who boarded ship in Port Everglades, Fla., on Feb. 6, 1973, with 25,909 nautical miles, 16 world ports and full credit for one semester of her junior year awaiting her.

"Then I saw my room for the first time," she said, "and I almost turned around and went back. No porthole — you couldn't tell whether it was day or night. So tiny the two beds hardly fit. There was one desk, no dressers, and the closets were just gym lockers."

Low on funds, Dixie had designated the most inexpensive quarters. She was granted an $800 scholarship based on high scholastic standing and financial need. The trip cost her an additional $3,200 — a staggering sum for a struggling college girl but a real bargain compared to the cost of a four-month pleasure cruise 'round the world. "I'll be paying it off for quite awhile," said Dixie.

RECONCILED TO her living quarters, she entered wholeheartedly into scholastic and social activities aboard the S. S. Universe Campus, an 18,000-ton air-conditioned ocean liner owned and operated by Orient Overseas Line. The ship is equipped with laboratories, a library of 10,000 selected volumes, audio-visual equipment, a theater, a model microfilm library, dining room, student union, offices, bookstore, snack bar, swimming pool, sports and sun decks, gift, barber and beauty shops.

Her curriculum of 15 credit hours consisted of Music Cultures of Africa, Asian Literature, Comparative Education, Population Analysis and Anthropology. Her companions consisted of about 450 students from more than 200 colleges and universities throughout the United States and several foreign nations.

NINE AND A half days out of Port Everglades, the S. S. Universe Campus reached the port of Casablanca, Morocco, where students disembarked for their first in-port experience, a vital part of the academic program. About 45 percent of the voyage is spent in port, the average stay lasting three days. Each student is briefed in advance on the culture, customs, history, money, food, transportation, entertainment and the like, and carries a street map of each major city.

"Whenever we hit port, we were on our own," said Dixie.

In-port experiences consisted of city orientations, optional programs, and practice — free, required or elected programs to complement the courses being taken. "About one practicum per credit hour was required," explained Dixie. "But they were so interesting, I signed up for 25 of them."

SHE VISITED schools to enrich her education course, small villages in connection with anthropology; she attended drama performances for Asian literature and native dancing and musical performances for music cultures of Africa.

Besides elephants, Dixie saw wild-beasts, lions and zebras on her safari in Kenya; traveled to several different national parks in Kenya and Tanzania; looked up at majestic Kilimanjaro and down into mysterious Ngorongoro Crater. And she realized a budding anthropologist's dream — to discuss with one of the Leakey family at Olduvai Gorge their monumental discovery of the earliest human skull yet unearthed, predating any previous evidence of human existence.

WERE THERE any scares?

"Cape Town, South Africa, was kind of creepy with its apartheid situation," explained Dixie. "One of our black friends wasn't too happy to make that stop. There's real hard line discrimination there, even separate roads for the blacks."

Another tense port was Luanda in Angola, Africa, where students were not allowed to leave the city limits because of the danger of terrorist attacks.

"When we were in the Philippines, Manila was under martial law," said Dixie. "Stress went off at 10:30 each night and we all had to rush back to the ship and be off the streets by 11 p.m."

IN JAPAN, Dixie and her friends visited famous shrines, rode the "bullet" train from Kobe to Tokyo, wore kimono and dined shoeless at floor level on sushi-yaki and tempura. They enjoyed the luxury of a Japanese bath, washing and rinsing themselves before soaking in a tank of hot water.

Food was an adventure in itself. Aboard ship, a Chinese-American menu prevailed; special occasions were celebrated with Chinese banquets. In various ports, Dixie sampled fried gazelle, sweet-sour pork, raw fish, bean cakes and rice balls. French pastries in Senegal were scrumptious, and ice cream — anywhere — was a real treat.

"This is terrible," admitted Dixie sheepishly, "but we were always on the lookout for a good old American hamburger. We even found a McDonald's in Japan and A&W Root Beer stands in Manila."

"BUT MOST OF the time we ate aboard ship. I'd rather see things and buy things than eat my way around the world!"

Language was seldom a barrier for there was usually someone nearby who spoke English. If not, Dixie managed on her high school French. "Our biggest language problem was in Japan," she said.

In its voyage 'round the world the S. S. Universe Campus visited the ports of Casablanca, Dakar, Tema, Luanda, Cape Town, Mombasa, Victoria, Madras, Singapore, Manila, Hong Kong, Keelung, Kobe, Yokohama and Honolulu, crossing the date line once, the equator twice, and arriving in Los Angeles on May 27.

"IT WAS A wonderful experience," said Dixie. "We were treated so nicely everywhere we went. At times the arrival of our ship was the big news of the town."

"I have developed a new awareness of the rest of the world and a keen interest in worldwide news."

Dixie Whiting is returning to the University of Illinois in Urbana for her senior year in pursuit of a degree in elementary education. Not only does she have a wealth of tales of distant lands and peoples to charm a future young audience, but 700 slides as well to set them to dreaming about those far-away places.

Is there a ship in your future?

World Campus Afloat offers two four-month programs aboard ship each year, corresponding to the semester calendar of most colleges and universities. One program begins in February and one in September. In addition, two five-week summer sessions are offered.

For additional details, projected itineraries, a listing of courses currently being offered and instructions for applying, readers may write to World Campus Afloat, Chapman College, Division of International Studies, Orange, Calif. 92666.

Well baby volunteer program begins

The Healthy Baby Volunteer Program of the National Foundation March of Dimes was set into motion last week in the Northwest suburbs.

One of the largest scale efforts ever undertaken by a health agency, the pilot program is an attempt to provide "Every baby with a birthright: the right to a vigorous, healthy start in life," said Jan Sainsbury, director of activities for the Chicago March of Dimes.

Each year an estimated 250,000 children are born with birth defects in the United States. The March of Dimes works on three fronts to treat, alleviate and bring the over 1,200 different birth defects under control.

First, they support research. Funds raised by the March of Dimes go to institutions seeking ways to improve diagnosis and devise better treatment methods.

SECOND, THE foundation educates physicians, dentists and other health professionals by providing the latest scientific knowledge about congenital diseases, their causes, their diagnosis, their treatment and their prevention.

Third, the March of Dimes seeks to inform the public of the advances in medicine, of progress in prevention and what laymen can do to help achieve the goal — to prevent birth defects.

The Healthy Baby Volunteer Program involves the last point. Women from throughout the Northwest area met at the Brasserie, in Arlington Heights, to learn what their work as volunteers may mean to other families in the area.

Each prospective volunteer was given a kit containing posters, March of Dimes literature, family medical health records, and identification. Sainsbury stresses that there is no "bulk-in pace" for the volunteers. "You can do as much or as little as you have time to do," he said.

HEALTHY BABY Volunteers receive bulletins periodically from the March of Dimes headquarters in Chicago with project ideas and a look at what other volunteers have done.

The women were encouraged to work with hospitals, schools and in their neighborhoods to educate the public about the battles that have been won and the many more to be fought against birth defects.

Sainsbury emphasized that "healthy mothers almost always have healthy babies," and urged the volunteers to seek out expectant families and distribute prenatal care literature to them. "We must care what happens to the health of the community, particularly children," he said.

Healthy Baby Volunteers will work as liaisons in the community, providing information to families with the hope that some day birth defects will be stamped out. The goal set to cure polio was met — there was only one case reported in 1972. The new goal is to combat birth defects — one in 14 babies born in the United States has a significant birth defect.

For further information about the Healthy Baby Volunteer Program contact the March of Dimes at 263-1070.

Amanda chose an old-fashioned gown of white lace with long sleeves and matching yoke, and long train. A Juliet cap held her waist-length veil, and she carried white daisies with baby's breath and blue cornflowers.

Gloria Calkins, Skokie, was maid of honor, and Jo Havelhorst, Villa Park, Mary Griffin, River Grove, and the groom's sister, Robin Sorenson, Des Plaines, were bridesmaids. All wore flowered pinaflores, Gloria's in yellow, the others in blue. Gloria carried a nosegay of yellow daisies with blue cornflowers and the maids carried white daisies with cornflowers.

THE GROOM'S 4-year-old niece, Kristin Sorenson, Des Plaines, was flower girl, wearing a yellow flowered gown and carrying a basket of white daisies with cornflowers.

Mark Weaver, Palo Alto, Calif., was best man, and Syed Ali Abid, Karachi, Pakistan, Tom Less, Park Forest, and the groom's cousin, Bill Cook, Oak Park, were groomsmen. Seating guests were Alan Krol, Des Plaines, and Ron Ragland, Rolling Meadows.

The newlyweds honeymooned for a week in the Ozarks and are now residing at 1321 Washington St., Des Plaines.

Paddle wheel featured at wedding

A dinner aboard a paddle wheel boat on the Mississippi and a reception that included houseboat rides on the river were among the festivities at the wedding of Amanda Lou Stutsman and James Robert Sorenson.

Married Aug. 4 in United Methodist Church, Port Byron, Ill., Amanda is the daughter of the Duard A. Stutsmans, Port Byron, and James is the son of the John R. Sorensons, 2170 Elmira Ave., Des Plaines.

The paddle wheel, at Clinton, Iowa, was the scene of the rehearsal dinner and the houseboat rides were included in the informal buffet reception held for 150 guests at the Stutsman home on the Mississippi. An earlier reception was held in the church parlors.

Amanda and James met at Northern Illinois University from which both graduated in 1973. Amanda in special education, and James in political science. A graduate of Moline West, James teaches at Chippewa Junior High School, Des Plaines, and Amanda at the Edsel School for the Handicapped, Villa Park.

THE COUPLE wrote their own vows for the 2 p.m., double ring service which was performed by the bride's uncle, The Rev. J. M. Steffenson, Mount Vernon, Iowa. He was assisted by the bride's

A wedding in-the-round

The cathedral-ceilinged, in-the-round Christ Presbyterian Church in Largo, Fla., was the scene Aug. 4 for the wedding of Dawn Chisholm and Leon Gustus. The 2 p.m. double ring service was followed by a reception in Siple's Garden Seat, Clearwater, Fla., for 70 guests, and the newlyweds honeymooned in the British West Indies.

Dawn, daughter of former Mount Prospect residents the James L. Chisholms, Largo, and Leon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Truman Gustus, Mount Prospect, are now residing in Champaign, Ill., where both are students at the University of Illinois. Dawn studied two years at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, before transferring to the U of I. She will graduate in June in advertising. Leon will graduate in June from the school of business.

FOR HER WEDDING Dawn chose an Empire gown of white dotted Swiss trimmed in Venice lace. The gown was made with long sleeves and a full skirt ending in a train. Her bouquet, in assorted colors, included roses, daisies, bachelor buttons, ivy, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Leslie Ann Chisholm, Fort Myers, Fla., was her sister's maid of honor wearing a mint green dotted Swiss gown fashioned similarly to the bride's gown. In pink, peach and blue dotted Swiss gowns were the bridesmaids, Kathy Kuttner, Evanston, and Miriam Hyman and Nancy Koenig, Skokie, all college roommates of the bride.

Brand Gustus, Mount Prospect, was his brother's best man, and ushers were another brother, Rolfe Gustus, Carpentersville, Tony Millard, college roommate from Wilmette, and Brian Gayle, Highland Park.

The Potting Shed

by Mary B. Good

I'm a little hung up on insect-eating plants, and that's why this is the second time I've written about the Plant Oddities Club.

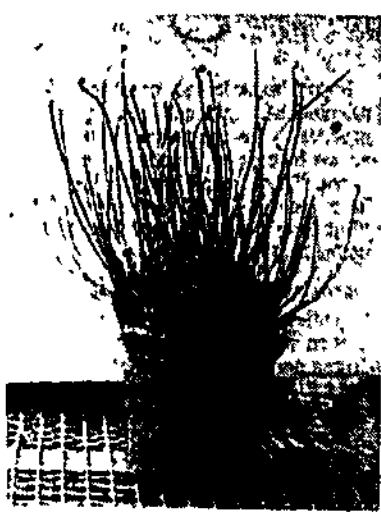

Each month the club, located at Box 127 A, Basking Ridge, N. J. 07920, sends out a newsletter about weird plants and offers them for sale to members. I paid my $5 dues so I hear from them regularly. Someday I hope they have a convention so I can see what the other members who grow plants that lure, trap and digest insects look like.

The "freak-of-the-month" this month is the tall and terrible sundew plant. It's not a glaucous carnivorous plant that devours people, but it does have dozens of sticky arms that unfurl from the bulbs as it snares its insect meals.

Lots of people confuse sundew with Venus fly trap. They both have needy hairs, but the traps spring closed on their prey, suck the juice out of them and open up to reveal a withered bug the grower then flips off with his finger. As insects land on sundew's glistening hairs, on the other hand, the gnat or fly becomes firmly stuck — nature's own flypaper. Enzymes secreted by the plant digest the insect meal.

SMALL SUNDEWS grow naturally in the sunny marshes of northern Wisconsin, but I have never been able to find them although I know many people do.

So I'll be sending away for the freak-of-the-month that comes all ready to go complete with planting mixture, cultural directions and a tall gro-dome for a planting unit.

I figure it will probably take about 15 plants to keep my patio mosquito free for the remainder of the summer.

Somebody asked me what I'm going to do when winter comes, but I'm not worried because I'll be ready for the fall migration to my crawl space with a couple sundews waiting.

And you must admit it sure is more interesting than pesticides, safer too.

The Consumer

by Monica Wilch

Vocational schools are gaining in popularity as the attraction of a college education wanes among young people. While jobs in many professional occupations have become exceedingly scarce in the last several years, the need for skilled workers in everything from auto mechanics to watch repair has continued to grow.

But, as so often happens, great demand creates an environment for fraud. In this case, the Federal Trade Commission has warned consumers to beware of deceptive and unfair practices of vocational schools.

The agency has launched an investigation of more than 300 vocational schools nationwide to combat abuses. Meanwhile, anyone considering a vocational school should follow these guidelines:

Beware of trade school deceptions

• Find out whether there are jobs available for the skills you would learn. Talk to companies, employment agencies, labor unions and trade associations. Ask employers whether they would hire graduates for the school you are considering, whether they already have hired any, whether the training made any difference in starting salary.

• Ask the Better Business Bureau or the Federal Trade Commission whether there have been complaints or recommendations regarding the school or course you want.

• Seek additional advice from the Veterans Administration or career counselors, and visit the school itself.

THE FTC HAS also moved to require "clear and conspicuous" disclosures in foreign language advertisements and sales materials. That means that any information required by the FTC in an ad — such as warning labels or ingredient listings — must be given in the same language as the rest of the ad.

The FTC noted that there has recently been an increased effort among advertisers to reach foreign language-speaking consumers with special ad materials printed in foreign languages. But sometimes certain vital parts of the message have been left in English.

THE CONSUMER Product Safety Commission recently moved to halt the production, distribution and sale of aerosol spray adhesives after a scientist at the University of Oklahoma tentatively linked the spray adhesives to genetic damage.

While there is no immediate danger to children or adults from use of the adhesives, it is thought they may cause chromosomal breaks in subsequent offspring, especially if exposure occurred during or immediately preceding pregnancy.

The spray adhesives involved are "Foil Art Spray Adhesive" and "Scotch Brand Spray-Ment" manufactured by the 3-M Co. of St. Paul, Minn., and "Krylon Spray Adhesive" manufactured by the Borden Co. of Columbus, Ohio.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: This is our first summer to be using a pool regularly and I've noticed a peculiar insect in the water, sometimes in fairly large numbers. They scoot along with long, flat legs and, while none of us has been bitten, they're a nuisance. They look like flies and I can't figure out how they live in the water. Have you ever run into a question like this?

—Noam Hartweck

Not until now. But a check discloses that these are called "water boatmen." They're harmless. They're not disease-carriers and they do not bite humans. They can stay submerged for quite a while by enveloping themselves in bubbles of air. They spawn in ponds and streams. Since they are strong fliers, they probably make their way to pools like yours. Skimming nets are the easiest way to remove them.

Dear Dorothy: Is there a way to test baking powder to make sure it's still good? I don't want to make a cake unless

I'm sure the powder is okay. What's the shelf life of baking powder? —Mrs. Shanklin

Add some tap water to a little of the powder. If it foams up, it's still good. Kept tightly closed with its self-sealing cover, it ought to keep indefinitely. I've never heard of an actual time limit but I hear that baking powder is soon to get a date line on the bottom of the can. It's wise to shake well before using.

Dear Dorothy: While I've never used pine cones to keep cats out of the garden, I do know a sure cure. Use citrus peelings — orange, lemon, lime, grapefruit — whatever you have on hand. Just toss them about and the cats will stay away. —Judith Simpson

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Latent syphilis treated like new case

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am worried sick as I think I had syphilis 20 years ago. What are the blood tests? If it doesn't show there, what other tests can be taken? What is the treatment at this late date? Please answer. Could anyone catch it from me now? I'm a female, please help me.

Dear Reader — Your question is one which is asked more often than you might think. People think or suspect that they may have had syphilis early during life. This may or may not be true.

First, let me tell you that at least four to five years after infection with syphilis it's most unlikely that you would be able to pass any form of infection onto anybody else. The disease goes through several stages.

There is the initial primary stage with the localized sore. Then, there is the secondary stage which causes generalized symptoms, including skin rash, and finally there is the late stage which is the non-infective stage. Incidentally, once a person passes into the late stage he may become permanently immune to syphilis and have no other symptoms or signs of syphilis throughout his life, although the previous infection may be detected by a blood test.

The only way to find out if a person in the late syphilis group still has difficulties is by a rather extensive medical examination. The problem is that a person may not have any symptoms and appears healthy and unable to transmit the disease to anyone else, but there may be slow changes occurring in the body which can involve the heart, eventually producing cardiovascular syphilis, the brain or other parts of the body. These slow insidious changes make it mandatory to treat a person who has had syphilis in the past, even though he may be asymptomatic and not have any signs of infection.

THE ORDINARY screening blood test for syphilis may indeed be negative in some individuals with late syphilis. There are other more sensitive tests, however, which can be done if there is any history which suggests a previous infection. By the combination of different tests that are available, in a person who has a possible history of syphilis, it's usually possible for the physician to establish whether or not this is true. Further tests, including looking at the spinal fluid, may be needed to tell whether there is a slow silent involvement of other parts of the body.

To be specific about your question then, it's entirely possible, if you have any real reason to think that you've had syphilis as long as 20 years ago, that you could have late syphilis, and it is entirely possible that you would be completely asymptomatic. It is even possible that you might never have any problem from it again in the remainder of your life, but to assume that this is the case is a very serious gamble.

Further, if it can be established by laboratory studies, including blood tests, that you have had syphilis in the past, it should be treated as a new case, to be sure that there is no slow, silent, insidious process going on that will damage your heart or brain or joints later in life. Finally, you should be reassured that, even if you should have late syphilis, it is not possible at this age for you to transmit it to somebody else.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

When your partner leads the king of a suit, under what circumstances do you play the queen?

There is one easy answer. Any time the queen is a singleton.

When else do you play the queen? When you want to tell your partner that you also hold the jack.

When we watched this hand played, East signaled with the eight of diamonds. West continued with the ace and six. South ruffed the third diamond and drew trumps.

Then he tried and lost the club finesse. East took his king and led a spade, but the boat had sailed. South rose with the ace and was able to discard his queen of spades on dummy's fourth club.

Only East had been willing to signal with the queen of diamonds. West would have led low. East would win the jack and, assuming he was smart enough to lead back a spade, the defense would have wound up with one spade trick in addition to the two diamonds and one club they were sure to get.

Just one trick, but the one to set declarer.

Commemorative Stamp for Artist Henry Ossawa Tanner

First day ceremonies Sept. 10 at Pittsburgh, will mark the release of an 8-cent U.S. commemorative stamp honoring American artist Henry Ossawa Tanner.

Tanner was a prominent black painter who spent most of his career in France where he was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor. Much of his art is based on Biblical themes and has hung in the Louvre.

The stamp is another in the American Arts series, is semi-jumbo in size and was designed by Mark English of Georgetown, Conn. It will be issued 40 stamps to a pane with six plate numbers.

Collectors desiring first day cancellations should send their requests to "Tanner Stamp, Postmaster, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15219" enclosing the proper remittance which is the cost of the stamps to be affixed.

THE UNITED Nations has postponed release of its Namibia issue, scheduled for appearance Sept. 17, until Oct. 1.

Oct. 1 will also be the last day of sale of the U.N.'s "Disarmament Decade" souvenir card. Withdrawal was previously slated for Sept. 17.

The U.N.'s Economic Commission for Europe stamps will be withdrawn from sale at the close of business Sept. 11.

SEVEN U.S. stamps were removed from sale at the Philatelic Sales Unit on August 13. They are the 8-cent CARE,

Huff elected chairman of county 4-H council

Charles Huff of Palatine recently was elected chairman of the North Cook County 4-H Council, based in Arlington Heights.

Huff, who has been active in 4-H activities for 10 years, is leader of the Plum Grove 4-H Club and a member of the 4-H Fair Association.

Members of the 4-H Council from the Northwest suburbs include Bill Carey of Mount Prospect; Dr. Norman Cornelius and Diane Rindal, both of Arlington Heights; Walter Johnson, Maria Richter and Walter Ross, all of Palatine; Anne McIlugh of Buffalo Grove and John Lemke of Wheeling.

The council works with the professional staff in coordinating the county 4-H program. Members of the staff include Dorothy Jacobs and Ellen Conoscenti, both of Arlington Heights; and Alice Mueller, of Mount Prospect.

Sidney Lanier, Peace Corps and Family Planning and the 11-cent City of Refuge stamps.

THE U.S. Postal Service has announced a change in policy governing the sale of commemorative and special stamps at post offices.

Effective Aug. 16, the maximum length of time that clerks at regular stamp windows will stock commemorative stamps is now 60 days rather than 90 days as in the past. After 60 days, only philatelic windows and postal stores which serve the collectors' market will stock commemoratives for a longer period.

The stamps will continue to be available by mail from the Philatelic Sales Unit, Washington, D.C. 20036.

GORDON UNGLAUB and Frank Fischer tell us the Sept. 4 meeting of the Northwest Suburban Philatelic Club will be devoted to an auction of U.S. and foreign stamps. One hundred lots, including material for novice and advanced collectors, will be presented. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at St. Mark's Youth Center, 205 S. Wille, Mount Prospect. All area collectors are invited to attend. Questions? Write Padlock Publications, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Gas price stickers now available

Price control stickers for gasoline pumps are now available at U.S. post offices in Northern Illinois, Jack Chivatero, acting district director of Internal Revenue, said.

The stickers must be used by gasoline and diesel fuel retailers to comply with Cost of Living Council requirements that they post on each pump the Phase IV ceiling price and minimum octane ratings, Chivatero said.

Saturday is the deadline for station owners and operators to comply with the posting requirements.

Chivatero said gasoline and diesel fuel retailers must obtain one instruction sheet per station and one sticker for each pump. If more than one grade of gas is sold from a pump a separate sticker must be posted for each grade. Post offices will hand out stickers together with instructions.

Bulk quantities of the stickers will not be distributed to trade associations, Chivatero said.

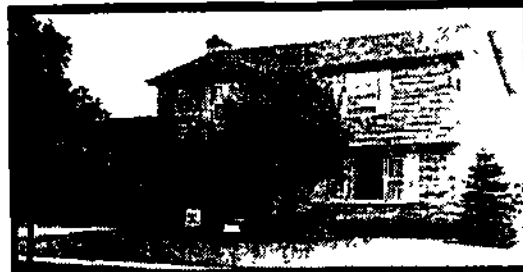

On the reverse of the instruction sheet is a form on which the ceiling price, octane number, grade of gas, pump serial number and sticker number must be listed. The completed sheet should be retained at each station for IRS inspection. Forms do not have to be notarized.

Chivatero said that, in general, gasoline ceiling prices are based on which-over is greater — the dealer's actual markup on Jan. 10, 1973 or seven cents per gallon. This figure is added to the price the dealer paid for his gas on Aug. 1, 1973, to arrive at the ceiling price.

DuBrow on TV...by Rick DuBrow

'Sesame Street,' 'Zoom' returning

HOLLYWOOD — Non-commercial television's national network gained attention this summer with its lengthy nighttime broadcasts of the Senate Watergate Hearings.

Now the network — the Public Broadcasting Service — is preparing to start its regular new fall season. And officials in both PBS and commercial video undoubtedly will be watching closely to see whether the summer's Senate telecasts will have any appreciable effect, one way or the other, on general audience interest in the public network.

Returning PBS children's series include "Sesame Street," "The Electric Company," "Zoom" and "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood."

Among the returning public affairs series are William Buckley's "Firing Line," "Bill Moyers' Journal," "The Advocates," "Washington Week in Review" and "Wall Street Week."

There is scheduled to be a nine-part adaptation of "War and Peace," produced by the British Broadcasting Corp.

"Also making its debut this fall," says PBS, "will be 'The Men Who Made the Movies,' an in-depth view into the thinking of major Hollywood directors of the 1920s and 30s, including Alfred Hitchcock, King Vidor, Frank Capra and Howard Hawks."

THE PERIODIC but notable "Hollywood Television Theatre" series will be back "with three or four two-hour major productions," according to PBS.

And the "Hollywood Television Theatre" staff will also offer nine shorter works, starting Nov. 7 with George Bernard Shaw's "The Man of Destiny," featuring Stacy Keach and Samantha Eggar, and directed by Joe Hardy.

Another of these shorter plays was written by actor Gardner McKay, is entitled "Me," and is described as concerning "the effect of a mentally retarded boy on other members of his family."

There is a planned PBS special about aging in America, and the network says the program "will explode the mythology of old age, using a comedy-variety-musical format." The program is being made possible by a grant from the Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Co.

"Masterpiece Theatre" is another returning PBS series, and this season it will include some well-known mystery tales as a lighter alternative to the normally classical literary fare.

Scheduled also for the upcoming season is a salute to the late Louis Armstrong, "taped at the 1973 Newport Jazz Festival and featuring Ella Fitzgerald, Dave Brubeck and Dizzy Gillespie," said a PBS announcement.

And a 90-minute visit with the American Ballet Theatre is on tap as well.

IN THE WORKS, too, says PBS, is a new series entitled "Theatre in America" which will present a number of theatrical productions. One of these will be "Cyrano de Bergerac," enacted by the American Conservatory Theatre and taped at the University of California at Berkeley.

For California theater owner

'Throat' grosses $2 million in 38 weeks

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — What sort of man owns a theater that would exhibit "Deep Throat?"

In Hollywood his name is Vince Miranda. He owns the Pussycat theater chain, 20 strong from Sacramento to National City, Calif.

Miranda is a dark-visaged man of Portuguese descent with black hair and piercing eyes. He is soft-spoken, immaculate in dress and flawlessly mannered. Yet one suspects a flinty interior. Miranda has been playing the X-rated, unabashedly hard-core pornographic "Deep Throat" for almost a year. He will face trial soon on misdemeanor charges of exhibiting obscene material.

"It's the biggest hit we've ever had," he said the other day at lunch with his press agent and the manager of the Hollywood Pussycat.

"I can tell you this: 'Deep Throat' has grossed $2 million at my theater in less than a year. That's 15 1/2 per cent of the first-run income for all theaters in Los Angeles for the first six months of 1973.

"Rumors say the picture cost between $28,000 and $30,000 to make. Personally I don't know. But that $2 million isn't all profit to me.

"I bought the picture for my theater because I looked at the grosses it was making in other situations. I knew it would do good business for me."

THE PHOS AND CONS of the moral question of showing outright pornography do not concern Miranda. He is not a man to weigh and judge the burdens of the world. The dollar is his yardstick.

"I don't see anything morally wrong with pornography," Miranda said.

"People should be allowed to see what-ever they choose. Obviously they want to see pornography as evidenced by the success of this picture.

"People come here from all over the country to see it. Almost half our audience is women. The people who come to our boxoffice represent every segment of American life, little old ladies, the rich, the poor, hippies. All races and age groups, except those under the legal age.

"Almost every star in Hollywood has been to the theater to see 'Deep Throat.' There are prints on the Bel Air circuit. Big names in this town show the film at home to their friends.

"The picture has been closed down in various parts of the country by politicians who figure they can get a lot of publicity. It worked.

"THEY HAVEN'T closed us down, but they've tried. The vice squad has confiscated a print of the film, but we haven't missed a showing. They hang around the theater trying to get evidence, harassing my employees.

"But 82.5 per cent of our audiences say they are not offended by the picture.

Only 3 per cent said they didn't like the film. And that was a UCLA research group that took the survey.

"There was a high percentage of college graduates in the survey.

"The new Supreme Court ruling on pornography will take a year to untangle the legal aspects of pornographic movies. I've been in business 12 years and the law has never been more confused than it is now.

"I want to obey the law. If it is clearly established what is forbidden to be shown in theaters, I'll abide by it."

IN ADDITION to his Pussycat chain, Miranda owns four other theaters which he calls "domestic" theaters. In these he exhibits family films such as "Sound of Music" and "Lost Horizon."

"None of them has ever grossed $2 million in 38 weeks and 2 days," Miranda concluded. "But then neither have any of the Pussycats until now.

"I don't know if 'Deep Throat' is a better picture than other pornographic movies, but the controversy has made it respectable. The public is anxious to see what officials are trying to prevent them from seeing.

"That and women's lib are the big reasons. Now that women are free to speak up about sex and to approach sex openly they have helped 'Deep Throat' become a hit."

Bicentennial medal coming

The official Illinois Bicentennial Medal will go on sale Sept. 10 in banks, savings and loan associations and many retail stores throughout the state.

The medallion will be minted in both silver and bronze and will sell for $12.50 and $3.50 respectively. Proceeds from the sale will go to the Illinois Bicentennial Commission for Illinois' contribution to projects honoring the nation's 200th birthday.

The medallion reflects Illinois' pre-Revolutionary heritage, showing the head of a Plains Indian and the pre-1776 emblems of England and France, along with the word Illiniwek which the French changed to Illinois. The other side of the medallion shows the Kaskaskia State Capitol building, Illinois' capital from 1818 to 1820.

GOV. DANIEL WALKER will receive the first medallion in ceremonies hosted by the commission and the Lincoln Mint at the Bismarck Hotel Sept. 7. Andrew McNally, president of Rand McNally & Co., chairman of the commission, will present the governor with the newly minted silver medallion encased in a lucite outline of the state of Illinois.

The governor will then introduce 18-year-old Robin Neumann of Waukegan, winner of the statewide contest among high school students to design the medallion.

In the coming three years additional medallions will be designed and minted to complete the American Revolution Bicentennial observance, with other high school students being asked to participate in the design.

Collecting Coins

by Mort Reed

Type collecting, or the systematic arrangement of no more than one specimen of each coin type issued for any given denomination of U.S. coinage, is rapidly advancing in popularity over the conventional consecutive series systems. It provides appropriate diversity for those interested in the entire American coinage picture without the boredom experienced by the consecutive series collector.

But aside from having to acquire fewer pieces to complete a "set," Type collecting demands intelligence, keen observation and sound judgment if it is the purpose to exact its maximum potential profit yield. In time, a well-prepared Type set of quality U.S. coins will surpass all known systems as a hedge against inflation, and make no mistake about it.

THE PRIMARY principle may be likened to the election of one qualified member of community to Congress as opposed to sending one member of each household. One exceptionally fine specimen of each denomination type issued, with all of the attributes of a near-perfect coin is something to behold. And a complete Type set (U.S. Dimes as shown below) with all pieces in a similar condition is almost indescribable.

More often than not, the total cost of a single coin in extremely fine condition will be less than the total cost of a complete consecutive series in a lesser condition.

It is not the intention of this comparison to downgrade the importance of one collecting system in favor of another. It is simply a means of disclosing the advantages of new thinking within the hobby resulting from actual practice.

Actually, there is not that much difference between the two systems. The acquisition of the most expensive pieces first, before they are priced out of reach, is the recommended procedure for any system whether it be single coin investments, consecutive (chronological) series or Type collecting. Once the scarce or key coins are in the collector's cabinet, he is free to shop around for bargains in the pieces of lesser value.

A typical example can be demonstrated with the U.S. Dime denomination issued from 1796 to date. Here it is neither feasible nor advisable to start a consecutive series collection unless one's funds are unlimited. There are literally hundreds of pieces required to complete a chronological series and most are merely repetitious copies varying only in dates.

A Type set of these issues is not at all out of reason and the better the grade or condition, the better the profit yield when a sale is on the offing.

A Type I (1796 or 1797) can be had for $800 to $1,000, in Very Fine condition. A Type II will run from $275 to $700 and a Type III from $40 to $250 in the same condition. Type IV will cost from $150 to $250 with all remaining Types V, VI, VII, VIII, IX and X available below $100 each.

Uncirculated specimens are much more desirable because of condition but not always available. In the case of the Type I 1796 Dime, a 20-year estimate value profile study shows it with a market value of from $120 to $131.94 in 1952. In 1962 the price increased from $500 to $707 and 10 years later it sold for $2,000 to $2,150.

The Type II went from $160 for an uncirculated copy in 1952 to $500 in 1962 and roughly $1,100 in 1972. A Type III priced from $70 to $91.10 in 1962 for an uncirculated specimen rose to $180 to $230 in 1962 and $405 to $474 in 1972.

AND EVERYTHING NICE ABOUT FOOD

Rice is right for economy and nutrition

Penny-pinching meals don't have to be dull . . . but it is quite a challenge to prepare meatless dishes or ones using low-cost meats in ways that are attractive, flavorful, and adequate in nutrients. Here are several dishes that do all three things!

Rice is the basis for all of the recipes. It is one of the most economical foods you can buy, costing only 2 to 3 cents per serving. There are foods that cost less, but they are not as popular or versatile, nor can they be served as often. Rice does contain protein — in fact the protein in rice has all of the essential amino acids and in the proper proportions. However, these are not present in large enough amounts for rice to be served as the only protein food at a meal. These recipes combine inexpensive rice with less expensive proteins for good nutrition and good eating.

Broccoli-Rice Quiche turns eggs and cheese into a nutritious entree that is as pretty to serve as it is tasty. Rice, eggs, and cheese are made into a crust that is filled and baked with a seasoned broccoli-egg-cheese mixture. Protein is the hardest of the nutrients to get in adequate amounts in low-cost meals, but here with each serving supplying 1 egg, a half-cup of rice, and some cheese, the protein quality is good. For variety, a second recipe is included showing how to use these same ingredients for a casserole — two recipes in one!

Rice and any variety of cooked dried beans also provide good protein. There are many good recipes in this category, but this one for Yellow Rice and Black Beans is most attractive. Diced tomatoes along with a bit of diced bacon and ham are used in the rice for flavor. The real protein comes from the combination of rice and beans.

Dried beans are an excellent source of inexpensive protein, and their flavor is enhanced when they are combined with other foods. The beans shown in the picture are often called Cuban black beans. Black beans can be purchased in the dry form for cooking and flavoring at home. They also come canned in a plain or a seasoned variety. Actually any well seasoned dish of cooked dry beans tastes great over Yellow Rice.

The Apple Dinner Casserole is one of today's tastier canned meat recipes. It is basically diced canned meat and kidney beans, simmered in a rich mixture of apple sauce seasoned with catsup, molasses, and prepared mustard. But do serve it in style. Give each guest his own individual casserole to serve over rice. Here again, that tasty combination of rice and beans . . . but this time with an inexpensive meat added, for another good protein dish.

- 3 cups hot cooked rice
- 1½ cups (6 oz.) grated sharp Cheddar cheese
- 6 eggs
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ cup chopped onions
- 2 packages (10 oz. each) frozen chopped broccoli
- ½ cup milk
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 can (4 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained

Combine rice, ¼ cup of the cheese, 2 eggs, slightly beaten, and ½ teaspoon salt. Press firmly and evenly over bottom and sides of a greased 12-inch pizza pan or two 9-inch pie pans. Set aside. Add onions to broccoli and cook according to package directions. Drain well. Beat remaining eggs slightly. Stir in milk, pepper, mushrooms, and remaining salt. Add to broccoli and mix well. Spoon into crust. Bake at 375 degrees for 20 minutes. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Bake 10 minutes longer. Cool a few minutes before cutting into wedges. Makes 6 servings.

- 2 packages (10 oz. each) frozen chopped broccoli
- ½ cup chopped onions
- 2 cups cooked rice
- 1 can (4 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
- 1½ cups (6 oz.) grated sharp Cheddar cheese
- 6 eggs
- ½ cup milk
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper

Combine broccoli and onions and cook according to package directions. Drain well. Add rice, mushrooms, and ¼ cup cheese. Beat eggs slightly. Stir in milk and seasonings. Add to broccoli and mix well. Turn into a greased shallow 2-quart casserole. Bake at 375 degrees for 20 minutes. Sprinkle with remaining cheese and bake 2 to 3 minutes longer. Cut into squares to serve. Makes 6 servings.

YELLOW RICE and BLACK BEANS

- ¼ cup diced bacon or salt pork
- ¼ cup diced smoked ham
- ½ cup chopped onions
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 1 cup uncooked rice
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Crushed red pepper to taste
- 2 cups water
- 2 teaspoons achiote lard*
- 1 medium tomato, chopped or diced
- 3 cups hot, cooked, well-seasoned black beans or pinto beans

Saute bacon and ham in a heavy pan (preferably iron) until bacon is almost done. Drain off excess fat. Add onions, green pepper, and garlic. Cook over low heat until tender crisp. Stir in rice, seasonings, and water. Bring to a boil; reduce heat, cover, and simmer 15 minutes or until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed. Blend in achiote lard until rice is an even golden yellow. Add tomato and toss lightly. Serve beans over yellow rice. Makes 6 servings.

*A mixture of lard and achiote, or annatto (bija) seeds. The seeds are cooked in the lard to give it a deep golden color; then the seeds are strained out. In case the seeds are not available, color the lard with paprika, saffron, or turmeric.

APPLE DINNER CASSEROLE

- 1 cup thinly sliced onions
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 can (12 oz.) luncheon meat, diced
- 1 can (15 oz.) apple sauce
- 1 can (15 oz.) red kidney beans, drained
- ¼ cup catsup
- ¼ cup molasses
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 4 cups hot cooked rice

Saute onions in butter until golden brown. Add luncheon meat; continue cooking about 3 minutes. Add remaining ingredients except rice. Bring to a boil, reduce heat, and simmer about 5 minutes to blend flavors. Serve over beds of fluffy rice. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Franfare

The current beef shortage has put chicken on more than an occasional dinner table. However, now there's bad news for homemakers who've come to rely on poultry as a versatile protein source. They may have to search even deeper into the recipe box. It looks like chicken may be disappearing from the market too.

Chicken shortages are likely to result this month, according to Dr. Robert Wunderle, director of economic research for the National Broiler Council. The anticipated shortage is a consequence of the recent price freeze, he said. Here, in brief is the report from the Broiler Council.

Although chickens were exempt from the freeze, as a raw agricultural product, the freeze did apply to poultry distributors who economically could not afford to pay producers more than their freeze price at which they could sell broilers. (Distributors' freeze prices were generally two cents per pound over the processors' price during the base period, says the Broiler Council).

The net effect was that broiler prices during the freeze period were held down at artificially low levels. In many cases below producers' cost of production. In some cases producers lost as much as six cents per pound on weekly production volumes of approximately two million pounds.

At the same time, the costs of feeding chickens remained relatively stable at record high levels because most producers had bought feed ingredients before their prices dropped in response to export controls.

The consequence of the cost price squeeze created by the freeze was a reduction in the number of eggs hatched and chicks placed in housing for growing. Government figures indicate that from Sept. 4 through Sept. 29 approximately 17 million fewer chickens will be marketed than during the same period last year. This will place September production nearly seven per cent below last year's level.

Thus far this year marketings are off 1.5 per cent compared to last year, as a direct result of price control problems created in December, 1972. The problems created by the recent price freeze will be even greater, according to the Broiler Council.

Price controls in agriculture, and particularly for broilers can be effective in keeping prices down, but the Broiler Council suggests that there may not be any chickens to buy.

How to beat high cost of food

by AILEEN CLAIRE

Vegetables are high on the list of do-eat foods for those who want to restrict or control harmful cholesterol buildup. Soup is a regular appetizer for many. Often a hearty soup, such as a Garden-fresh Potato Soup, served with bread, salad and dessert, is a complete less expensive meal. Commercial soups that fit into a low-fat, low-cholesterol menu include beef broth, chicken broth, chicken gumbo, chicken noodle, chicken vegetable, green pea, onion, tomato, vegetable, old-fashioned vegetable and vegetarian vegetable. Avoid soups that contain high-fat ingredients. These are cream soups, seafood chowders or stews and Cheddar cheese soups.

GARDEN-FRESH POTATO SOUP

- 2 cups cubed raw potatoes
- 1 cup sliced carrots
- 1 cup chopped onions
- 1/2 cup diced celery
- 1 pound fresh peas or 1 (10-ounce) package frozen peas
- 2 quarts seasoned chicken

- broth or 8 tablespoons chicken stock base, reconstituted
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic salt
- 1/4 teaspoon dried basil leaves
- 1/4 teaspoon oregano
- 2 tablespoons snipped parsley

Wash and prepare vegetables. Heat chicken broth to boiling. Add vegetables, except parsley, and seasonings. Simmer vegetables until tender, about 20 to 30 minutes. Sprinkle with parsley and serve. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Watermelon rind to relish

More women, and men, too, are discovering the joys of putting up their own fruits and vegetables. Pickles and relishes definitely are a part of one's homemade food pantry and topping many a list is Crisp Pickled Watermelon Rind. This crunchy treat stems from the German love of sweet-sour foods and found a home among the settlers from Pennsylvania who made their homes in the Middle West many generations ago. They took their recipes for "seven sweets" and "seven sours" with them.

CRISP PICKLED WATERMELON RIND

- 5 pounds watermelon rind
- Water
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 8 teaspoons alum
- 9 cups sugar
- 1 quart cider vinegar
- 4 sticks (2 inches each) cinnamon
- 2 teaspoons whole allspice
- 2 teaspoons whole cloves

Cut off and discard the green and red portion from watermelon rind, leaving only the white inner rind. Cut the rind into 1 to 1-and-one-half inch pieces. (Makes 4 quarts.) Place rind in a large enamel or stainless steel pot. Add water to cover; stir in salt. Bring to boiling point; reduce heat and simmer only until rind can be easily pierced with a fork, about 15 to 20 minutes. Remove from heat, stir in alum. Cool. Cover and let stand 24 hours.

On the second day: pour off water. Rinse and drain rind well in pot. Add sugar, vinegar and cinnamon sticks. Tie allspice and cloves in cheesecloth. Add to watermelon rind mixture; stir. Bring just to boiling, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and cool, uncovered. Cover and let stand 24 hours.

On the third day: drain off syrup to a large saucepan. Bring just to boiling; pour over rind and cool; cover and let stand 24 hours.

On the fourth day: repeat procedure as for third day.

On the fifth day: heat rind in syrup, but do not boil. Remove and discard spice bag. Pack rind and cinnamon in hot, sterilized jars. Heat syrup to boiling. Fill jars with boiling syrup. Seal immediately. Wait at least 4 weeks or longer before serving. Yield: 4 quarts.

(NOTE: Alum may be purchased in drug stores.)

It's pear season

UNLIKE SOME fruits, all pears are picked and shipped green because they develop a finer flavor and smoother texture when ripened off the tree.

When buying fresh Bartlett pears, don't be misled by scars or minor surface blemishes because these do not affect the fruit's inner delicacy. Many of the most delectable pears, in fact, have highly russeted skins.

Although pears are in season from July to April, Bartletts are the summer pears. When ripe, they are creamy yellow in color, with an attractive red blush.

Omni-House prevents youths from reaching end of road

by JILL BETTNER

The 15-year-old kid is nervous. He slouches further down in the chair and recrosses his long, bluejeaned legs. Brushing his hair out of his eyes with a shaking hand, he blurts out his story.

"Look man, I didn't do nothin'. I mean that teacher just doesn't like me, so she kicked me out. Hey, you know my old man wouldn't understand that, so I had to split — I had to."

It's a familiar alibi, one Harry Wells, Omni-House counselor, has heard from lots of other runaways. Lots of other kids like this youth who doesn't really understand why they leave home, why life is unbearable there.

Some minor scrape a kid gets into can trigger the impulse to run, Wells said, but usually it's just a manifestation of trouble that's been brewing for a long time.

The suburban lifestyle contributes to a situation Wells said is difficult for many adolescents to handle.

A COMMUTING father who catches the 6 a.m. train to the city not to return until late evening often leaves behind a nonworking wife. Lonely, with too much time on her hands, Wells said she turns to her children for attention she can't get from her absent husband.

Without realizing it, he said, she becomes a "smother mother," quenching with well-meaning affection the natural teen-age desires for freedom and independence until she literally drives her child to make a break for it.

"This is the kind of mother who very often says, 'My whole life is my children,'" Wells explained. "When a child reaches puberty, there's a normal storm of conflict inside him between wanting freedom and needing to depend on his mother. But when she puts too tight a rein on him, she forces him to look for ways to get away from her."

So, he runs. Last year, 51 kids in the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove area took off, most for one, maybe two days. They don't usually go far, friends put them up for a couple of nights and then they nearly always show up for school.

That's when they're picked up by the local police and returned to their worried parents. Often the juvenile officer handling the case will suggest counseling through Omni-House, a youth services bureau that operates out of a storefront at 516 N. Milwaukee Ave. in Wheeling.

THE COUNSELING is not just for the runaway, it's for the entire family.

"We don't isolate the child and say, 'hoy, you're the patient here, you're the one who needs to be fixed,'" Wells said. "The whole family is in trouble."

After talking individually with the child and the parents, the professional psychologists, social workers and ministers at Omni-House set up the kind of counseling they think will be most beneficial.

Sometimes, it's essentially marriage counseling, to help the parents recognize and work out the problems between them that are affecting the child.

The child is not allowed, however, to blame his behavior on his parents' difficulties. He is encouraged to join Omni-House teen groups, not therapy groups, but kids involved in a variety of projects and activities. As part of the group, the child must learn to accept the responsibility for his acts and function as a contributing member.

THE FIGURES are not an entirely accurate measure of the success of the Omni-House approach, but out of the 51 local teenagers who left home last year, only four felt as though they had to get away again.

"We've found that getting to the parents seems to be the answer — approaching the fact that a kid runs away as a family problem," Wells said. "As long as the relationship between the parents improves and so increases their effectiveness as parents, the behavior of the child almost always improves. Unfortunately, the converse is also true."

Youth was unaware of village's intent

Pearson says he won't pay expenses asked by village for snake search

By JEANNETTE DeWYZE

Although Buffalo Grove officials say they are contending with plans to bill David Pearson for costs of the recent village snake hunt, the youth stated flatly that he would not pay.

The snake hunt developed Saturday afternoon when Pearson, 18, told police that Seymour, which he described as being a deadly cobra snake, escaped from his residence at 563 Maple Dr.

After three days of frantic search, however, village officials announced that they believed Seymour was a non-poisonous rat snake. Officials based this opinion on testimony from a snake expert who examined a shedded skin which police said came from the escaped snake.

Pearson was unaware of the village getting ready to bill or sue him until contacted by The Herald yesterday.

"I WOULD TAKE it to the highest court I could find," Pearson said when asked about the possibility of the village initiating civil action in the courts to collect the damages.

The decision to attempt to bill Pearson for the search costs came in the form of a resolution which was passed by a 6-0 vote of the village board Monday night.

The resolution states that the village should determine the cost of the search and present a bill to Pearson. In the event Pearson cannot or will not pay the bill, the resolution directs the village attorney to initiate the civil action.

In proposing the resolution, Trustee Thomas Mahoney said he did not think village taxpayers should be forced to pay for a search that was caused by the negligence of one resident.

Pearson said yesterday, however, that he did not feel he had been guilty of any negligence in connection with the snake.

IN DISPUTING THE charge of negligence Pearson said he informed the police that he was keeping the snakes the second day after he received them for safekeeping from Eugene Bowling, a Wheeling friend. This was about a month and a half ago, he said.

He said he invited Buffalo Grove police officer Charles Weidner in to look at the snakes, which included Seymour, two boa snakes and a water snake.

In addition, Pearson said he and Bowling asked Weidner to check on the legality of keeping the snakes. He said he offered to remove the snakes immediately if there was any law prohibiting them or if he was presented by a petition signed by 50 village residents asking for removal of the snakes.

ABOUT A WEEK later the police told Pearson that he could legally keep the snakes, Pearson said. While the police have confirmed the entire incident, police chief Harry Walsh has said that the department was mistakenly acting on "bad advice."

Pearson also said he would refuse to pay for the search costs because he disapproved of the manner in which police conducted the snake hunt.

Pearson said although he had consented to the shoot-to-kill order which police issued, he felt that the shotguns used in the snake hunt were both unnecessary and dangerous. He also said he felt police should not have started the search at the house and then moved outward, as they did, since Pearson said he thought this would tend to drive the snake away.

Although Pearson voiced criticism of the police methods in hunting Seymour, he said Monday that he was following a police recommendation to avoid further public comment on the snake itself. He said the recommendation was aimed at preventing the further spread of public panic over the snake.

THUS, HE REFUSED to comment on whether he thought Seymour was a rat snake or a cobra snake.

He did say, however, that he planned to go with a police officer to a zoo where he could identify a snake which looked like Seymour.

Pearson described the snake as being black, red, and gold.

"I also knew that the snake had a hood, because it tried to bite me a few times," he said.

Village Attorney Richard Raysa yesterday said when he was first consulted about the potential suit against Pearson he had expressed the opinion that the search costs could be recovered. However, Raysa said he was unaware that the police had told the youth the snakes were not illegal.

If further legal research reveals that a suit would be unfeasible, Raysa said he would recommend that the village not prosecute Pearson.

Faced with a disorderly conduct charge and a possible court battle, Pearson said yesterday that his primary concern was still the recovery of the snake.

"I'm just worried about the snake biting someone," he said.

Parade plans being finalized

by JOE FRANZ

Final preparations are being made for Sunday's annual Buffalo Grove Days parade.

The parade, which will begin at 1 p.m., is one of many activities planned for the four-day Labor Day weekend.

Between 1,200 and 1,500 persons will participate in the parade. Floats and marching bands from various local organizations will take part with awards going to the best bands and floats.

The parade will originate at Arlington Heights Road and Bernard Drive. It will proceed down Bernard to Raupp Boulevard and then north on Raupp to the village hall, where the reviewing stand will be located.

FOLLOWING THE parade, residents can participate in a variety of activities. At 1 p.m. Sunday an art fair will open in front of the village hall. About 50 artists from throughout the state will enter the fair, which will feature watercolor paintings, acrylic and oil paintings, drawings and graphics.

Cash awards and ribbons will be given for the best works. Anyone wishing to enter the fair should call Ted Uskali at 537-5280.

There also will be a homemaking contest following the parade. Residents will compete in needlecraft, baking, canning and gardening. The resident judged to be the top homemaker will be crowned "Homemaking Queen."

In addition, a motorcycle demonstration will be given by the Medinah Motor Corps, near the village hall.

Bogart said two buses will be in operation from 12:15 p.m. until 9 p.m. to provide transportation to and from the parade area. He said the service is being provided to discourage persons from driving.

One bus will pick up residents in Lake County and the other will transport residents from the Cambridge and Mill Creek subdivisions. Both buses will go to the village hall.

PICKUP POINTS in Lake County will be at Castle Wood Lane and Checker Drive, Checker and Farrington Drive, Checker and Essington Lane, Checker and Ridge Field Lane, Indian Spring and Ridge Field, Ivy Hall Lane and Indian Spring, Dorncliff Lane and Indian Spring, and Twisted Oak and Burnt Ember lanes.

Residents in Cambridge can catch the bus at Cambridge Drive and Sussex Court, Cambridge and Anthony Road, and Cambridge and University Drive. Pickup points in Mill Creek are at Green Ridge Road and Thornton Lane, Mill Creek Drive and Radcliffe Road, and Thornton and Radcliffe.

Buy dinner tickets -- time's running out

Time is running out for residents to purchase tickets for Saturday's dinner dance which is part of the 11th Annual Buffalo Grove Days celebration.

This year's festivities, which will begin tomorrow and run through Monday, will take place in a Roaring 20's setting.

Promoters of the dinner dance have emphasized that reservations must be made in advance. They have said ticket sales have been going slowly and have urged residents to come to the dance and help make Buffalo Grove Days a success.

Tickets for the dinner dance, which will be at the Ranch Mart Shopping Center, Dundee and Buffalo Grove roads, are $5 each. Promoters said the price is the same as the last four years even though food prices have increased substantially.

Tickets can be purchased at the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd., Foremost Liquors in the Buffalo Grove Mall or Rose-Lynn Flooring in the Ranch Mart. Tickets are also available by calling Bobbi Katz at 537-1498.

COCKTAILS WILL BE served at 7 p.m., with dinner at 8 p.m. The buffet dinner will include beef, chicken, ham, Swedish meat balls, several salads and a relish tray. Beer on tap will also be available.

In the event of an overflow crowd, those who are not served dinner will receive a refund, according to Norm Katz, co-chairman of the festival.

Bill Scott and his band will provide dance music from 9:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Although not compulsory, residents are urged to come to the dinner dance dressed in Roaring 20s attire. Prizes will be given for the best costumes.

One highlight of the dance will be the presentation of the citizens commendation award to the person chosen as Buffalo Grove's outstanding resident in 1973. Village Pres. Gary Armstrong will make the presentation.

Drop-in centers planned

Several programs especially for junior high and high school students are planned this fall and winter by the Buffalo Grove Park District.

Drop-in centers, designed for informal recreation and to provide a meeting place for teens, are planned at several community locations.

Emmerich Park will be headquarters for the junior high council drop-in center. A board of directors will be formed to plan social activities sometime in September. Some of the activities that will probably be included are trips to area points of interest, bowling leagues and co-ed sports nights.

Buffalo Grove recreation director Mike

Ryko will serve as advisor to the junior high council. Membership is $1 for the school year.

Two high school council drop-in centers are planned at Willow Stream Park and Emmerich Park.

A board of directors will be established for each council to plan individual and cooperative activities under the guidance of adult advisors.

Students may join either council for a fee of $1 for the school year.

Registration for all park district programs is scheduled to begin Saturday, Sept. 22 at the Emmerich Park building, 150 Raupp Blvd.

by STIRLING MORITA

Jim Wills bared his soul yesterday afternoon, but his birthday suit was a little too much for Hanover Park police.

Police "pinched" Wills, 50, on charges of disorderly conduct and public indecency after they found him sunning his bare backside in his backyard at 7102 Meadowbrook Dr., Hanover Park.

Two plainclothes detectives were responding to a complaint filed about 2 p.m. at the police station by a citizen.

Wills staged the browning-in-the-buff incident with help from his lawyer, William Stukas. Wills hopes to provide a test case on the question of the legality of nude sunbathing.

The self-proclaimed nude sun bather, who was released on $1,000 bond, is scheduled to appear at 9:30 a.m. Sept. 20 in the Schaumburg branch of the Circuit Court.

ARRESTING OFFICERS said they had been aware of "Mr. Wills' intentions," but added that they did not know the incident would take place until the complainant came to the station. Wills said part of the plans included a specially picked complainant who would walk by and report it to the police.

"I'm doing it primarily from a religious motivation, you might say," Wills said.

"I'm not afraid of getting arrested. Jesus Christ was arrested, and he was right," he added.

Wills, a marketing statistician for a housewares firm, went into his backyard about 2 p.m. The yard is about 50 by 60 feet with a chain-link fence around the perimeter. The neighbors have an unobstructed view of Wills' backyard.

Wills had spread out a white towel in the northeast corner of the yard next to the house. He sat down and talked to his wife who was whispering from a nearby window.

He waited a minute, and then gingerly slipped his pants off. He lay with only the backside exposed.

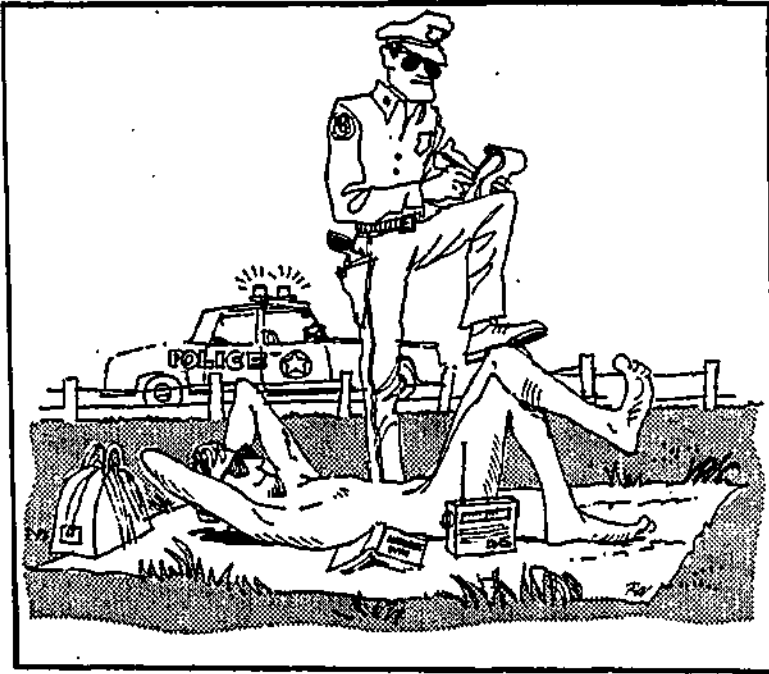

HE SAID HE WAS not really embarrassed to take his clothes off, but added, "If there was a group of 30 or 40 persons along the fence yelling and screaming, then it might be a little embarrassing."

A neighbor couple did not seem to take note of Wills' nude body, but a few minutes later a female voice called out, "Apparently, it doesn't bother you that I have two teen-aged girls out here."

The detectives then walked through the backyard gate and advised Wills of his constitutional rights. Wills put on his clothes, was handcuffed and taken to the police station for booking procedures.

Wills said he at one time had opposed pornography in Chicago. He added that his life took a 180-degree turn when he had an "awakening" one night.

"I was sleeping one night. And I thought, 'Who is higher than the Supreme Court? God of course,' and God made us nude when we were born. The Bible does not say nudity is bad," Wills, who says he is a religious man, added.

THE RIGHT TO sunbathe nude without police interference is the goal of Jim Wills, Hanover Park. Wills staged a nude sunbathing incident and was arrested. He plans to make a test case.

He recalled that his wife and his oldest daughter were somewhat against his intentions and that his youngest daughter "had a freer mind."

"I've gone nude sun-bathing in DuPage County. I have my place," he said. "I'm not doing it (protesting) just for myself, but for a cause."

AS COMPARED TO topless and bottomless bars, adult magazines and movies and nude bathing beaches around the world, he said nude sun bathing is nothing.

"There's nothing wrong with nudity. And there's nothing wrong with sunbathing," Wills said. "Two rights make a third right."

Mrs. Peggy Troccoli, 7097 Edgebrook Lane, a neighbor, said, "I was shocked. I was dumbfounded. I was certainly not happy with my teen-aged girls back there."

Miller seeks water hike repayment

Miller Builders, developers of the Mill Creek subdivision, plans to file suit against the Village of Buffalo Grove to recover damages for water rates that were raised after construction of the project began.

Bernard Peskin, Miller's attorney, said yesterday the village raised the water rates even though it agreed the rates and other fees would remain the same for the duration of the annexation agreement.

"We're in a dispute right now whether Miller Builders should have to pay an increase in rates that was imposed after the annexation agreement was signed," Peskin said.

He said Miller has paid the increases to the village under protest. The suit, which will probably be filed in two to three weeks, will ask the courts to order the village to refund the amount of the increase, he added.

Miller Builders is currently tabulating what they think the village owes them, he said.

VILLAGE MGR. DANIEL Larson said yesterday the annexation agreement only froze the costs for water tap on fees and other construction costs, not the water rates. He said the waterworks and sewage bond revenue ordinance passed in 1970 required the village to raise water rates to all of its customers, not just some. Law prohibits the village from charging one customer one rate and another customer another, Larson said.

Thus, he said, the village could not freeze the water rates for the duration of the annexation agreement.

Village officials have said all annexations executed between the village and a developer state the developer is subject to any increases in the water rates that might occur while the project is being built. "We have treated Miller Builders fairly, the same way as all other developers," Larson said.

In the meantime, the village has given tentative approval to a one-year extension on Miller's annexation agreement so it can complete the final phase of the development. The agreement, which was signed in 1968, expired last week.

Miller needs the extension because final plans for the last phase have not yet been approved and building permits have not been issued.

Village officials have said the village is obliged to extend the agreement because recent negotiations with Miller for more park land in the development have held up construction. Officials said Miller could have gone ahead with the final phase and would not have needed an extension had it not been for the negotiations.

ABOUT SIX WEEKS ago the village board rejected an offer for a 3.5-acre park site and decided to let Miller go ahead with its final plan for 12 two-story apartment buildings. The park offer was a result of the negotiations.

The offer was rejected primarily because it would have also allowed Miller to build a 1.97-acre shopping center on the northern end of the project, which is near Arlington Heights and Dundee roads.

The negotiations started last February when a group of Mill Creek homeowners shortage of park land in the development. The final phase has no park land.

$5 for an individual and $9 for mother and daughter.

Depending on interest, the park district is planning to offer a gourmet cooking class beginning in January. Anyone wishing to participate in the proposed class should make a request on the registration sheet that will be included in a brochure being mailed soon to residents.

The brochure will outline all fall and winter park district programs and explain the registration procedure.

Other programs that will be offered, if sufficient interest is expressed, include women's jogging and cycling, women's beginning bridge, adult beginning bridge, duplicate bridge, a family bicycle club and family camping and outdoor club.

Victim in satisfactory condition

Mechanic shot 8 times—roommate held by police

by JOHN MAES

A Des Plaines man was in satisfactory condition yesterday at Holy Family Hospital after being shot eight times at close range by his roommate Tuesday night, according to police.

Peter Kilen, 29, of 810 Beau Dr., was in intensive care yesterday afternoon, a hospital spokesman said. He had been shot in the jaw, chest and hand.

Kilen's roommate, Antal Schmidt, 29, was arrested minutes after the shooting. Associate Judge Marvin J. Peters ordered Schmidt, a Hungarian immigrant, taken to Cook County Jail on $25,000 bond early yesterday. He has been charged by Des Plaines police with attempted murder and aggravated battery.

The shooting stemmed from previous arguments between the two over the use of an automobile they shared, police said. The two worked together as auto mechanics at Laurel Motors, 280 E. Ogden Ave., in Westmont and had been living together in the Des Plaines apartment for about four months.

The incident occurred about 6:30 p.m. Police said Schmidt began shooting at his roommate immediately after Kilen returned from a shopping trip carrying bags of groceries.

Police said they were alerted by a building resident who was aroused by the gunshots. Several other residents also told police they were startled by the shots.

Police, who arrived on the scene about a minute later, nabbed Schmidt as he walked onto a terrace outside the first-floor apartment.

Police said they found Kilen's body lying on the floor of an adjacent apartment, after following a trail of blood from the terrace near where Kilen was shot.

He had apparently staggered into the next apartment through the terrace door in search of help before he fell, while the residents had run into the hall through the front door to investigate the gunshots, police said.

An automatic pistol, used in the shooting as well as a shotgun propped against a sofa were found during a police search of Schmidt's apartment, according to reports. Police had not learned yesterday afternoon if the guns were registered.

It was also noticed during the search that some bedroom furniture had been overturned and a telephone had been ped from the wall, according to reports. Schmidt had reportedly stayed home from work that day.

State's attorneys had difficulty questioning Schmidt Tuesday night. The suspect had been in the U.S. about three years and speaks little English. He is not a U.S. citizen.

Schmidt will be returned to Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court for a hearing Sept. 6.

Snake keeper: I won't pay

By JEANNETTE DeWYZE

Although Buffalo Grove officials say they are continuing with plans to bill David Pearson for costs of the recent village snake hunt, the youth stated flatly that he would not pay.

The snake hunt developed Saturday afternoon when Pearson, 18, told police that Seymour, which he described as being a deadly cobra snake, escaped from his residence at 568 Maple Dr.

After three days of frantic search, however, village officials announced that they believed Seymour was a non-poisonous rat snake. Officials based this opinion on testimony from a snake expert who examined a shedded skin which police said came from the escaped snake.

Pearson was unaware of the village getting ready to bill or sue him until contacted by The Herald yesterday.

"I WOULD TAKE it to the highest court I could find," Pearson said when asked about the possibility of the village initiating civil action in the courts to collect the damages.

The decision to attempt to bill Pearson for the search costs came in the form of a resolution which was passed by a 6-0 vote of the village board Monday night.

The resolution states that the village should determine the cost of the search and present a bill to Pearson. In the event Pearson cannot or will not pay the bill, the resolution directs the village attorney to initiate the civil action.

In proposing the resolution, Trustee Thomas Mahoney said he did not think village taxpayers should be forced to pay for a search that was caused by the negligence of one resident.

Pearson said yesterday, however, that he did not feel he had been guilty of any negligence in connection with the snake.

IN DISPUTING THE charge of negligence Pearson said he informed the police that he was keeping the snakes the second day after he received them for safekeeping from Eugene Bowling, a Wheeling friend. This was about a month and a half ago, he said.

He said he invited Buffalo Grove police officer Charles Weidner in to look at the snakes, which included Seymour, two boa snakes and a water snake.

In addition, Pearson said he and Bowling asked Weidner to check on the legality of keeping the snakes. He said he offered to remove the snakes immediately if there was any law prohibiting them or if he was presented by a petition signed by 50 village residents asking for removal of the snakes.

ABOUT A WEEK later the police told Pearson that he could legally keep the snakes, Pearson said. While the police have confirmed the entire incident, police chief Harry Walsh has said that the department was mistakenly acting on "bad advice."

Pearson also said he would refuse to pay for the search costs because he disapproved of the manner in which police conducted the snake hunt.

Pearson said although he had consented to the shoot-to-kill order which police issued, he felt that the shotguns used in the snake hunt were both unnecessary and dangerous. He also said he felt police should not have started the search at the house and then moved outward, as they did, since Pearson said he thought this would tend to drive the snake away.

Although Pearson voiced criticism of the police methods in hunting Seymour, he said Monday that he was following a police recommendation to avoid further public comment on the snake itself. He said the recommendation was aimed at preventing the further spread of public panic over the snake.

THUS, HE REFUSED to comment on whether he thought Seymour was a rat snake or a cobra snake.

He keeps his domain beautiful

Larry Komos: king of the city's forest

by STEVE BROWN

His domain includes nearly 25,000 subjects. He treats them with an even-handed amount of firmness and tender loving care and he has plans for improving the future.

The description might befit a royal leader, but it also aptly describes the king of Des Plaines' forest Larry Komos.

As the city's forester, Komos oversees the care of trees in the community. He works to see that dead or damaged trees are removed and new trees planted throughout the town.

Komos explained that the city has stepped up its tree planting program in recent years.

"Of the 22,000 to 25,000 trees in the city, we have planted about 5,000 of those in the past three years," he explained.

WHILE THE CITY contracts with outside firms for major tree trimming or removal projects, Komos said that emergency situations are handled by his department.

Komos and two assistants also draw manpower and equipment from other city departments as needed.

Disease, vandalism and negligence are the biggest enemies to the city's trees, he said. While the dreaded Dutch elm disease seems to be declining, there are other plant bugs that have done some damage.

CHECKING THE growth of one of the city's trees, Des Plaines forester Larry Komos works to ensure that all of the trees are healthy and properly maintained. Komos inspects the trees on a regular basis to check for disease and vandalism.

Last year the elm disease killed about 270 trees compared to a peak of nearly 900 trees two years ago.

Komos said that vandalism has also taken its toll. He explained that not too long ago someone broke a large number of young trees. He also noted several city projects on Miner Street have been damaged by careless motorist driving over small plantings.

"This type of damage is very disappointing," Komos added.

LOCAL RESIDENTS may begin to notice an improvement in the city appearance in the future through the efforts of Komos and others.

Both Komos and the newly created city beautification commission will be preparing plans for projects throughout the city.

He said that the city hopes to plan several projects similar to the North School parking lot beautification program which is now underway.

In addition to caring for the city's trees, which includes a monthly inspection, Komos said he frequently receives calls from residents who are having trouble with trees or shrubs.

"Usually I can answer a question or find someone who has an answer to the problem," he said, adding that many calls from residents will call attention to the problem that may affect the city's trees.

Komos said that he attends seminars and workshops to keep informed on new techniques related to his job. He added that during the winter months, he meets with representatives from other communities to discuss mutual problems.

THE FORESTER, who has had an interest in trees for more than 13 years, said the cooperation he receives from other city departments and officials is excellent.

"They know that caring for the trees is important and this helps with our plans," Komos said. He added that the city was recently able to obtain about $5,000 worth of shrubs free from Klehm Nursery in Arlington Heights.

"It was stock that needed to be pruned and while it might not have been profitable for them to do it, we can certainly make use," he noted.

While the city is getting ready to begin planting more trees this fall, Komos suggested that residents should be watering their trees and shrubs more this week during the heat wave.

"Even mature trees should get a lot of water during this heat, especially since there has not been a lot of rain recently," he said.

Oakton site choice could come in fall

Oakton Community College could get a site for its permanent campus this fall, according to an official of the state junior college board, but the college would probably need a second campus if North Shore communities annexed to the district next year.

Fred Wellman, executive secretary of the Illinois Junior College Board, answered questions from members of the Oakton board of trustees for nearly two hours Tuesday night. He said the state board would approve a permanent campus site for the college late this fall if the college board asked it to. However, if the state later decides to assign the North Shore to Oakton's district it would probably mean a second campus for the college, he said.

The Oakton Board of Trustees asked Wellman to attend their meeting Tuesday to respond to the board's decision to select a permanent campus site for the college this year.

The college had delayed selection of a site for several months hoping communities on the North Shore would annex to the district so the college could build the campus there.

EARLIER THIS MONTH Oakton officials decided to end all site studies on the North Shore and pick a site in the college district. The board of trustees passed a resolution to select a site "immediately" and the college citizens' site committee backed the resolution by recommending three sites in the district.

The North Shore could still become a part of Oakton's district by state law next year. The law requires all areas of Illinois to be in a junior college district but if non-district areas don't join a district or form one of their own the state places them in a district on Jan. 1 next year.

Wellman said the state's decision on the non-district North Shore area won't be final until next summer. He said Oakton could go ahead and select a site this fall.

Wellman told Oakton trustees the state board is "very hopeful Oakton can solve its site problem as soon as possible." If the college is "ready to make a decision on a site in the district," the state board staff would recommend that the state approve a site, he said.

Oakton trustee Raymond Harstein asked Wellman what the state planned to do with the North Shore. "We have not made any judgment on it yet," said Wellman. "In this case the staff feels it could go either way, annex to Oakton or form a district" for the North Shore communities. He added that student enrollment in both Oakton and the North Shore is large enough to justify a college campus for each area, whether the campuses are in separate districts or whether they are both in the Oakton district.

Oakton board chairman Paul Gilson complained that the law does not give Oakton any authority to deny annexation of the North Shore. "Nowhere does it give us any opportunity to present our viewpoint," he said, "Why don't you ask us?"

Wellman said Oakton does have a right to protest annexation of the North Shore in a public hearing next spring. He said the college could also state a preference to the state board this fall, but legally Oakton's statement would not have as much weight as a statement of preference from North Shore communities.

WELLMAN SAID his staff is ready to act immediately if Oakton chooses its temporary campus at 7900 N. Nagle Ave., in Morton Grove, as its permanent site, but said he has "some reservations" about two other sites in the northwest corner of the district also being considered for a permanent campus.

If Northfield Township is annexed to Oakton, "the northwest sites make a lot of sense," he said, but if Evanston annexes to Oakton, the sites are not as desirable because Evanston students would have to commute a long distance to the

Maryville protest expected to continue

by LINDA PUNCH

A parents' group opposing the Maryville School site will continue their protest despite an explanatory letter distributed by River Trails Dist. 26 administrators.

Karen Zuck, representing the committee for reconsideration of the school site, said she was not satisfied with the explanation given in the letter.

"I still don't think the board made a sound judgment on the site. First they made the decision, then they hear the dissent," she said. "To me, it's backwards as to the way Retzlaff (Dist. 26 acting superintendent) says he's doing it."

The parents group — formed after the board voted to place a new school for Maryville students on the River Trails Junior High School site — presented a list of questions concerning the site to board members at the Aug. 21 meeting.

The five questions dealt with requests for copies of the educational specifications, a building site description for the junior high and a freeze on any work currently in progress on the new school.

THE COMMITTEE also asked for answers on questions about the facilities of the new building and about purchase negotiations for a school site. Also requested was information on who will pay for bus service for the Maryville students, whether the new school will serve all district children and whether the state demanded that the Maryville site be located at the junior high.

Oakton board weighs computer cooperative

Oakton Community College plans to form a computer data processing cooperative with Niles Township High School Dist. 210 this fall.

Plans for the cooperative were reported to the Oakton board of trustees Tuesday night by Gary Saben, Oakton director of data processing. Saben said he had been meeting with Robert Gara, Dist. 210 business manager, since April and they are planning to submit a proposal for the cooperative to the Oakton and Niles boards next month.

Saben said he will reveal the cost of the cooperative when he submits the proposal to the Oakton board Sept. 18.

If the merger of the two data processing programs is approved, Saben said the cooperative computer center would be operating by mid-October. The center would be housed on Oakton's temporary campus at 7900 N. Nagle Ave. in Morton Grove. Saben said the merger would result in lower costs and improved service to both schools because they could share computer personnel and equipment.

The computer will be used for administrative record keeping and to train data processing students in both schools.

IN OTHER ACTION Tuesday the Oakton board approved a tentative budget for the 1973-74 school year which estimates operating costs at about $6.8 million. The costs are a 20 per cent increase over last year because they include $1.4 million budgeted by the college as a deposit on a site for a permanent college campus. David Hilquist, Oakton business manager, said a site will cost between $3 and $4 million.

The college lowered its tax rate by one-half cent making the rate 20 cents per $100 assessed valuation of property in the district.

Tuesday the Oakton board also agreed to print their quarterly report on recycled paper despite the increased cost to the district.

Trustee Robert Gutschick, who graduated from Oakton last May, asked the board to buy recycled paper in the interest of ecology. About 150,000 copies of the Oakton report are mailed to citizens in the district four times a year. The college awarded the contract to the low bidder who offered to print the report on standard paper for $14.98 per 1000 copies and $18.20 per 1000 on recycled paper.

Oakton site choice could come in fall

campus.

Several members of the state board have said they will not approve a site for Oakton if citizens in the district oppose it, Wellman said. When Oakton chose part of Maryhill Cemetery as a permanent campus about two years ago, the state board withdrew its approval of the site when a group of citizens said they did not want the college located there.

"You're saying if anybody squeaks too loudly you'll back off," said Oakton trustee Vivian Medak. She told Wellman "there is not going to be any site that is going to be equally desirable to everyone concerned. At some point somebody has got to say this is where it's going to be because there isn't any other land."

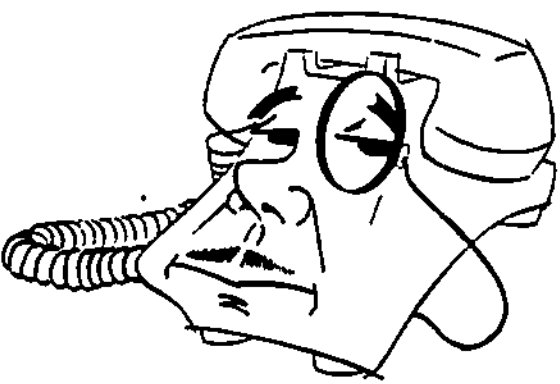

Wellman said the state board realizes there is no site that will please everyone. What concerns members of the board is the amount of opposition a site receives, he said.

Oakton officials plan to study the three sites under consideration, the temporary campus and the two northwest sites, and present one of the sites to the state board for approval in December.

Reenact Joliet, Marquette expedition

Canoists reenacting the 3,000-mile expedition of voyageurs Louis Joliet and Jacques Marquette will portage from the Des Plaines River into the Chicago River Saturday afternoon.

The eight voyageurs who began the canoe trip in mid-May in St. Ignace, Mich., will paddle down the Chicago River to Lake Michigan, then paddle north in the lake to Green Bay, Wis.

The men will arrive at the Portage in the Cook County Forest Preserves west of Harlem Avenue and south of 47th Street in Lyons on Saturday afternoon. Cook County Board Pres. George Dunne, other state and local dignitaries and 500 boy scouts will greet the canoists. The portage lies along a major fur-trade and war-party artery fought over for 125 years by the French, Indians, English and Americans seeking to control the gateway to the Mississippi River and the West.

Among the activities planned for the weekend are dedication of a 12½-mile hiking trail to the Portage from Bemis Woods and dedication of a plaque honoring the reenactment of the voyage.

Saturday night the canoists will camp near Damen Avenue at the site of a large cross erected to mark the spot where Marquette spent the winter.

At 2 p.m. Sunday the canoists will arrive at the Michigan Avenue Bridge for a half-hour program explaining the voyage to spectators. At 3 p.m. His Eminence John Cardinal Cody will offer a High Mass in Pioneer Court as an observance of the 300th anniversary of the voyageurs.

bringing Christianity to Chicago. Eleven priests will participate in the Mass using a birch bark canoe from the expedition as an altar.

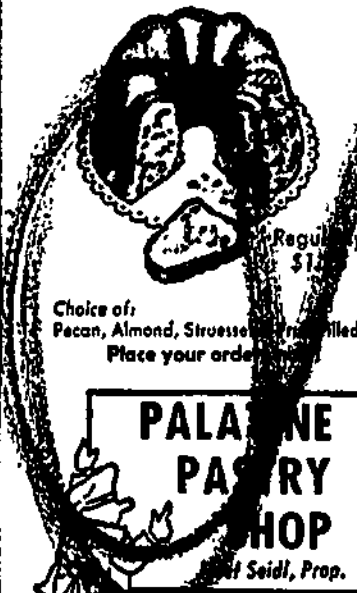

The celebration will also include an end to the observance of DeSable week honoring Jean Baptiste Point De Sable, the first Frenchman to settle in Chicago.

Champs, duffers to match strokes

The city's leading sluggers and duffers will hit the fairways today for the annual Des Plaines municipal golf outing.

The day-long event, at River Forest Golf Club, will attract many leaders in civic affairs, business and government from the Des Plaines area. A dinner will cap the day's event.

Reliable sources predicted yesterday that Ald. Joseph Szabo (1st) and Ald. Charles Bolek (3rd) are rated highly in the competition. However several new aldermen could be considered dark horses.

'Campus Life week' planned for Sept. 1-8

Many local communities have declared Sept. 1-8 "Campus Life Week." This week of emphasis will feature two programs including a student "Work-a-thon Day," and a special "Parent Workshop."

The Work-a-thon Day will involve hundreds of local high school students, giving service to their community, while raising money for the local Campus Life club program. Each worker, financially sponsored by interested adults, will work on Labor Day, Sept. 3, for civic groups, churches, hospitals, and other service organizations free of charge.

CAMPUS LIFE WEEK will conclude with "Discovery — A Parent Workshop" on Saturday, Sept. 8 at 8:30 a.m. The focus will be on relationships between husbands and wives, and parents and teenagers. The seminar will feature a morning session with John Powell, author and lecturer from Loyola University, luncheon, and an afternoon session led by Jay Kester, president of Campus Life. The workshop will be held at Maryville Academy, River and Central roads, Des Plaines. For further information on Campus Life week, contact 259-5144.

In Maine Township, the Campus Life staff includes Dave Veerman, executive director and leads the clubs for Maine East and Maine South; Mike West, Campus Life for Maine West and Maine North; and Bruce Dart, director of the Youth Guidance program in the Township.

Everyone who participates in the outing is a winner, according to city officials. Besides prizes for the outstanding golfers, everyone receives a door prize.

Arlington Heights road open soon south of bridge

Two lanes of Arlington Heights Road south of the Salt Creek bridge may be open to traffic "in a couple weeks," according to a spokesman for the Cook County Highway Department.

The spokesman said the two south-bound lanes are expected to be finished soon. Once curbs and gutters are installed and the concrete has had time to "cure," the lanes will be open to two-way traffic.

Exact date of the road opening will depend on the weather and other construction factors. The spokesman said concrete cannot be poured in extremely hot weather, which may delay the opening if present high temperatures continue.

After the two south lanes are open, work will begin on the northbound lanes.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Road is being widened to a four-lane road between the Salt Creek bridge near Elk Grove High School and Devon Avenue. The $2.5 million project is a Cook County construction program started in May.

The project, when completed, will make Arlington Heights Road a four-lane road throughout the length of the village. As part of the same project, Devon Avenue is also being widened to four lanes.

The work is being done in stages and is not expected to be completed until October, 1974.

The county spokesman said the work is on schedule so far, but future progress would depend on the weather.

Milburn Brothers, Inc. of Arlington Heights, was awarded the contract for the project.

In a separate project, the county is also widening Blesterfield Road west of Arlington Heights Road. Blesterfield is also being made into a four-lane road.

The construction has created bad traffic jams at the intersection of Arlington Heights and Blesterfield roads. Elk Grove Village police have scheduled special assignments for patrolmen to direct traffic at the intersection, especially during rush hours.

Keeper says he won't pay cost for big snake hunt

By JEANNETTE DeWYZE
Although Buffalo Grove officials say they are continuing with plans to bill David Pearson for costs of the recent village snake hunt, the youth stated flatly that he would not pay.

The snake hunt developed Saturday afternoon when Pearson, 18, told police that Seymour, which he described as being a deadly cobra snake, escaped from his residence at 560 Maple Dr.

After three days of frantic search, however, village officials announced that they believed Seymour was a non-poisonous rat snake. Officials based this opinion on testimony from a snake expert who examined a shedded skin which police said came from the escaped snake.

Pearson was unaware of the village getting ready to bill or sue him until contacted by The Herald yesterday.

"I WOULD TAKE it to the highest court I could find," Pearson said when asked about the possibility of the village initiating civil action in the courts to collect the damages.

The decision to attempt to bill Pearson for the search costs came in the form of a resolution which was passed by a 6-0 vote of the village board Monday night.

The resolution states that the village should determine the cost of the search

Mechanic shot eight times

by JOHN MAES
A Des Plaines man was in satisfactory condition yesterday at Holy Family Hospital after being shot eight times at close range by his roommate Tuesday night, according to police.

Peter Klien, 29, of 910 Beau Dr., was in intensive care yesterday afternoon, a hospital spokesman said. He had been shot in the jaw, chest and hand.

Klien's roommate, Antal Schmidt, 29, was arrested minutes after the shooting. Associate Judge Marvin J. Peters ordered Schmidt, a Hungarian immigrant, taken to Cook County Jail on $25,000 bond early yesterday. He has been charged by Des Plaines police with attempted murder and aggravated battery.

The shooting stemmed from previous arguments between the two over the use of an automobile they shared, police said. The two worked together as auto mechanics at Laurel Motors, 280 E. Ogden Ave., in Westmont and had been living together in the Des Plaines apartment for about four months.

The incident occurred about 6:30 p.m. Police said Schmidt began shooting at his roommate immediately after Klien returned from a shopping trip carrying bags of groceries.

Police said they were alerted by a building resident who was aroused by the gunshots. Several other residents also told police they were startled by the Trustees change ordinance

Wing wins way for his van truck

by FRED GACA

Robert Wing has won his battle of the boulevards without firing a shot. He can now drive his van truck on Kennedy and Elk Grove boulevards without getting a ticket.

The village had an ordinance prohibiting all trucks from using the boulevards as through streets. Any truck making a delivery to a home on the boulevard, or school buses and "camper" trucks had access to the boulevards. But the law was changed Tuesday night.

Wing, of 120 Essex, recently got two tickets for driving on the boulevard, and he vowed to fight the citations and carry the dispute to the village board.

Wing lives and works in the village; but had to take a roundabout route to get the two miles to his business in the industrial park because of the boulevard law. He said he had to travel six miles out of his way each day just to get to and from work.

Wing also said other vehicles such as campers are heavier than his van, but they were allowed because of their recreational license classification.

Tuesday night, Wing, with a small group of businessmen and their families who also opposed the ordinance, came to the village board meeting. Before Wing or any other member of the group could speak, the board changed the ordinance.

THE NEW ordinance allows trucks with a "B" license plate free access to the boulevards. A "B" license is the state license used for small, light-weight pick-up trucks and vans.

Trustee Edward Kenna, who made the motion to change the ordinance, said the original law prohibiting all trucks was a "mistake." He said the problem was further complicated by the construction work on Arlington Heights Road and Devon Avenue.

Trustee Ronald Chernick argued that the ordinance was good, but the enforcement was not properly done.

Kenna insisted the ordinance itself, not the enforcement, was a mistake and had to be changed.

Village President Charles Zetek said the original ordinance was designed to prevent heavy truck traffic from using the boulevards that are lined with homes, schools, churches and parks. He said the trucks would present a danger and a disturbance to the residents.

Zetek said the new ordinance would relieve the problems of the local businessmen with small trucks while still protecting the residents.

Wing thanked the board for its action, but he wanted to know what would happen to the traffic tickets that were issued under the old ordinance.

WING CONTENDED the police department had started a recent "campaign" against trucks on the boulevard and had written numerous tickets for the violation. Most of these tickets have not been heard in court.

The board, under advice from its attorney, Edward Hofert, decided against refusing to collect any fines or directing the police not to process the tickets.

Hofert said the courts would probably be inclined to dismiss the tickets in view of the board's action.

Although the new ordinance cannot be legally implemented for several days, Zetek told Police Chief Harry Jenkins to direct the department to stop ticketing the "B" license trucks immediately.

In other action at the meeting the board:

• Entered into an agreement with the state to install traffic signals at Elm-

Mini-bike, motorcycle riders without license face trouble

by FRED GACA

Under-age and unlicensed motorcycle and mini-bike drivers will be riding into trouble in Elk Grove Village.

If stopped by police, they and their parents will come before a stern judge who is worried about the danger a young rider presents to himself and others.

Associate Judge Albert LaPlante, who sits in the Elk Grove Village branch of the Cook County Circuit Court, said he has "no quarrel" with a young person learning about the mechanics of a motorcycle or mini-bike. "I am opposed to their reckless driving," he said.

Police Chief Harry Jenkins said many of the problems involve under-age drivers of mini-bikes. These are very small, motorized vehicles characterized by wheels only a few inches in diameter, short wheel base and small engine.

Mini-bikes are generally too small to be licensed for street use in the state, but Jenkins said parents often buy them for their children.

The youths, at first, ride only on their property, often going up and down the driveway. Jenkins said, however, that in a short time the youth usually takes the mini-bike on the sidewalk and then out on the streets.

ACCORDING TO Jenkins, the first time police stop a mini-bike rider on the street, the rider is given a warning. The second time the rider is stopped, his parents are told it is illegal for him to be on the street.

"Wisconsin has mini-bike trails where anyone can ride," said Jenkins. "Illinois has no place to use. Riders can only go on their own property or other private property if they have the consent of the owner. Owners don't grant permission because they can be held liable for accidents."

Repeated offenders will be charged and must appear in court, where "each case is decided on its own merits," said LaPlante.

He said the youths have to learn to live in a world of rules and regulations.

The youth, however, is not the only one on trial. "Parents are always on trial when the child is," said LaPlante.

According to LaPlante, parents have the responsibility to control the actions of their children. When parents refuse to enforce this responsibility, they are not helping their children.

"PARENTS ARE wishy-washy. They don't enter into the discipline of the children. They contribute to the delinquency of the children," he said.

"It's natural for a child to test his limits, to see how far he can go. It would be unnatural for a child not to do this," said LaPlante. "It is the parents' responsibility."

Sunbather bares his, er, soul

by STIRLING MORITA

Jim Willis bared his soul yesterday afternoon, but his birthday suit was a little too much for Hanover Park police.

Police "pinched" Willis, 50, on charges of disorderly conduct and public indecency after they found him sunning his bare backside in his backyard at 7102 Meadowbrook Dr., Hanover Park.

Two plainclothes detectives were responding to a complaint filed about 2 p.m. at the police station by a citizen.

Willis staged the browning-in-the-buff incident with help from his lawyer, William Stukas. Willis hopes to provide a test case on the question of the legality of nude sunbathing.

The self-proclaimed nude sun bather, who was released on $1,000 bond, is scheduled to appear at 9:30 a.m. Sept. 20 in the Schaumburg branch of the Circuit Court.

ARRESTING OFFICERS said they had been aware of "Mr. Willis' intentions," but added that they did not know the incident would take place until the complainant came to the station. Willis said part of the plans included a specially picked complainant who would walk by and report it to the police.

"I'm doing it primarily from a religious motivation, you might say," Willis said.

"I'm not afraid of getting arrested, Jesus Christ was arrested, and he was right," he added.

Willis, a marketing statistician for a housewares firm, went into his backyard about 2 p.m. The yard is about 50 by 60 feet with a chain-link fence around the perimeter. The neighbors have an unobstructed view of Willis' backyard.

Willis had spread out a white towel in the northeast corner of the yard next to the house. He sat down and talked to his wife who was whispering from a nearby window.

He waited a minute, and then gingerly slipped his pants off. He lay with only the backside exposed.

HE SAID HE WAS not really embarrassed to take his clothes off, but added, "If there was a group of 30 or 40 persons along the fence yelling and screaming, then it might be a little embarrassing."

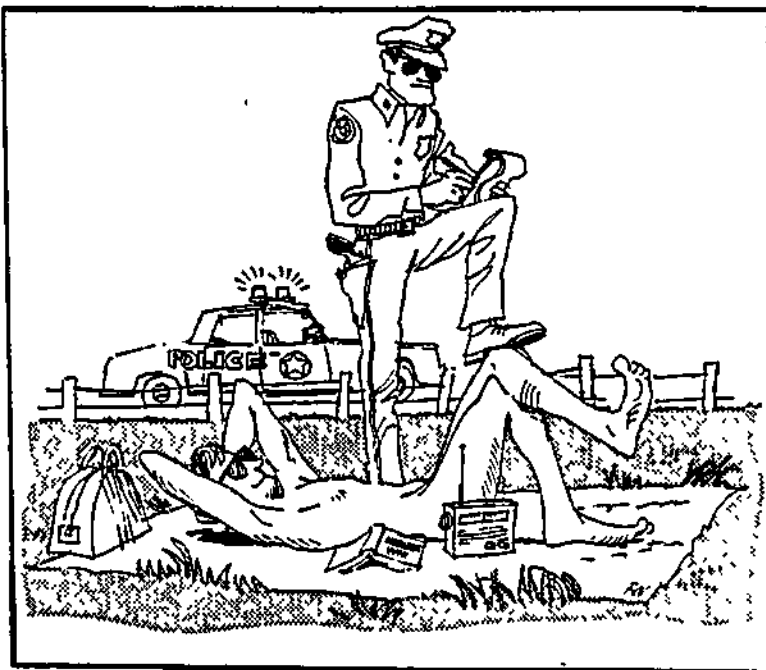

A neighbor couple did not seem to take note of Willis' nude body, but a few minutes later a female voice called out, "Apparently, it doesn't bother you that I have two teen-aged girls out here."

The detectives then walked through the backyard gate and advised Willis of his constitutional rights. Willis put on his clothes, was handcuffed and taken to the police station for booking procedures.

Willis said he at one time had opposed pornography in Chicago. He added that his life took a 180-degree turn when he had an "awakening" one night.

"I was sleeping one night. And I thought, 'Who is higher than the Supreme Court? God of course, and God made us nude when we were born. The Bible does not say nudity is bad,'" Willis, who says he is a religious man, added.

He recalled that his wife and his oldest daughter were somewhat against his intentions and that his youngest daughter "had a freer mind."

"I've gone nude sun-bathing in DuPage County. I have my place," he said. "I'm not doing it (protesting) just for myself, but for a cause."

AS COMPARED TO topless and bottomless bars, adult magazines and movies and nude bathing beaches around the world, he said nude sun bathing is nothing.

"There's nothing wrong with nudity. And there's nothing wrong with sunbathing," Willis said. "Two rights make a third right."

Mrs. Peggy Troccoli, 7097 Edgebrook Lane, a neighbor, said, "I was shocked. I was dumbfounded. I was certainly not happy with my teen-aged girls' back there."

"It was offensive to me," she added. "You notice he did it during the day when just the women are around. I'd like to see him do it with the men around."

But these little piggies aren't going to market

by JULIA BAUER

Prize-winning cattle, hogs, and lambs will stay on the hoof until the meat situation gets brighter.

At Arlington Park's Future of America Fair, the livestock owners chose to take their animals home instead of selling them at today's market prices.

The livestock auction barn was deserted Tuesday. Instead of the folksy clamor of farmers and their lifeblood, the animals they raise, there was only a silent wind blowing over the straw-covered arena and empty bleachers at the Future of America sale.

Ray Miltz, director of the livestock show, wistfully shook his head and blamed the situation on the meat price ceiling. Some 100 exhibitors brought their steers, hogs and lambs to be poked and scrutinized by judges from universities around the country.

Those farmers and breeders came from Indiana, Iowa and Illinois. One reason they came was for the judging. But another big reason was the hope of selling their animals for a better price than they could get in the regular marketplace.

IT SEEMS THAT the farmers came hoping to find a more receptive market, one with buyers willing to pay out more for this livestock than they would give for other animals.

When it became clear that the auction probably wouldn't bring the farmers any higher price, the livestock officials called a meeting with the exhibitors and decided to call off the auction.

Even if the sale had happened, Miltz had another major problem. He wasn't able to line up slaughterers to process the animals for people who bought one or two animals.

Miltz explained that most slaughterhouses want 60 days advance notice, and they don't usually like to handle a few animals for a single customer.

Many farmers across the nation also are holding back their livestock from market until the beef price ceiling is lifted Sept. 12 when prices are expected to jump considerably.

Livestock show officials are optimistic that next year will be better. For this year, the lucky farmers walked away with a ribbon and maybe a little prize money. The others went back home as they had come, with livestock in tow and out the cost of the entry fee.

Winners of the steer and hog judging included:

A cross-bred barrow hog won both championships for best barrow and heavy-weight, exhibited by Doug Linville of Greenfield, Ind. The medium weight champion was owned by Larry Thorsen, Morris, Ill., and lightweight champion was shown by Gary Kohl of Kankakee, Ill.

Paper shortage feared in schools here

Remember when kids ran to school with a blackboard slate under their arm and chalk clutched in their hands? It's a scene from the past.

It could happen in Schaumburg Township Wednesday when School Dist. 54 opens the doors at 24 schools.

Only half the usual paper supply Dist. 54 ordered for the school year was delivered, and administrators say they fear a paper shortage.

Joe Viso, director of buildings and grounds, said the district, with approximately 14,000 students, uses about 25,000 reams of paper a school year. Although the school does not supply students with paper, many of their work sheets are ditto machine or mimeographed tests supplied by the schools.

"We will use every inch of available space on a sheet of paper," said Viso. Administrators said they will attempt to use as little paper as possible.

This doesn't mean an end to written homework assignments. Students will just be asked to write on both sides of the paper.

Viso said the district's suppliers make no promises about eventual delivery and we are going to ration the supply we have.

The director said other material shortages have also affected operation of the buildings. However the paper shortage caused by rail strikes and the Canadian paper mill strikes "has us worried the most," he added.

"We have only one type of paper overstocked from last year, but it's just not suitable for classwork," said Viso.

"It's toilet paper."

I won't pay for snake hunt: keeper and present a bill to Pearson. In the event Pearson cannot or will not pay the bill, the resolution directs the village attorney to initiate the civil action.

In proposing the resolution, Trustee Thomas Mahoney said he did not think village taxpayers should be forced to pay for a search that was caused by the negligence of one resident.

Pearson said yesterday, however, that he did not feel he had been guilty of any negligence in connection with the snake.

IN DISPUTING THE charge of negligence Pearson said he informed the police that he was keeping the snakes the second day after he received them for safekeeping from Eugene Bowling, a Wheeling friend. This was about a month and a half ago, he said.

He said he invited Buffalo Grove police officer Charles Weidner in to look at the snakes, which included Seymour, two boa snakes and a water snake.

In addition, Pearson said he and Bowling asked Weidner to check on the legality of keeping the snakes. He said he offered to remove the snakes immediately if there was any law prohibiting them or if he was presented by a petition signed by 50 village residents asking for removal of the snakes.

ABOUT A WEEK later the police told Pearson that he could legally keep the snakes, Pearson said. While the police have confirmed the entire incident, police chief Harry Walsh has said that the department was mistakenly acting on "bad advice."

Pearson also said he would refuse to pay for the search costs because he disapproved of the manner in which police conducted the snake hunt.

Pearson said although he had consented to the shoot-to-kill order which police issued, he felt that the shotguns used in the snake hunt were both unnecessary and dangerous. He also said he felt police should not have started the search at the house and then moved outward, as they did, since Pearson said he thought this would tend to drive the snake away.

Although Pearson voiced criticism of the police methods in hunting Seymour, he said Monday that he was following a police recommendation to avoid further public comment on the snake itself. He said the recommendation was aimed at preventing the further spread of public panic over the snake.

THUS, HE REFUSED to comment on whether he thought Seymour was a rat snake or a cobra snake.

He did say, however, that he planned to go with a police officer to a zoo where he could identify a snake which looked like Seymour.

Pearson described the snake as being black, red, and gold.

"I also knew that the snake had a hood, because it tried to bite me a few times," he said.

shots.

Police, who arrived on the scene about a minute later, nabbed Schmidt as he walked onto a terrace outside the first-floor apartment.

Police said they found Kilen's body lying on the floor of an adjacent apartment, after following a trail of blood from the terrace near where Kilen was shot.

He had apparently staggered into the next apartment through the terrace door in search of help before he fell, while the residents had run into the hall through the front door to investigate the gunshots, police said.

An automatic pistol, used in the shooting as well as a shotgun propped against a sofa were found during a police search of Schmidt's apartment, according to reports. Police had not learned yesterday afternoon if the guns were registered.

It was also noticed during the search that some bedroom furniture had been overturned and a telephone had been ripped from the wall, according to reports. Schmidt had reportedly stayed home from work that day.

State's attorneys had difficulty questioning Schmidt Tuesday night. The suspect had been in the U.S. about three years and speaks little English. He is not a U.S. citizen.

Schmidt will be returned to Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court for a hearing Sept. 6.

The DJ: a living exhibition at fair

by MARCIA KRAMER

"It's six and a half away from eleven o'clock. Double-U-M Radio, you and Jack Stockton . . . Let's go back to Seventy-Two. You were around in Seventy-Two. It was only last year. Sister Rose and the Cornelius Brothers. This song was dynamite last year."

Stockton flicks a switch, grabs for a Marlboro and leans back in his chair as strains of "Too Late To Turn Back Now," a dynamite hit in '72 by Sister Rose and the Cornelius Brothers, come over the monitor.

"This is a way of getting a radio station to the public," he says, flipping his gold lighter and drawing on his cigarette. "That way the station is something more than sounds coming out of the radio in your house or car."

"This week, WMM Radio "the itty-bitty little radio station with the great big bumpersticker," Stockton calls it) is coming out of the Future of America Fair at the Arlington Park Race Track.

The "deejays" are holed up in a makeshift broadcast booth, a wooden shack plastered with WMM stickers and album jackets, in the midst of dozens of other booths in the grandstand.

Two sides of the booth are glass, which are covered with finger and nose prints as kids press up against it to get a look at the man behind the voice.

STOCKTON, ONE of five disc jockeys from the Arlington Heights station broadcasting from the fair, acknowledges the gazes with a smile here, a wink

there, and a confession the young admirers can't hear: "I'm really not an exhibitionist. I don't like to be watched."

The eeriness of being pointed and stared at wore off during his first day at the fair, though, and now the 35-year-old "deejay" doesn't seem to mind being in the WMM fishbowl, one of the most popular attractions at the fair.

In fact, after awhile, "It's fun to be here and meet all the people."

Stockton is one of those guys who really likes his work. "If I didn't, I'd be no good at it," he says, chuckling in an aside. "Some would say I'm no good anyway."

He breaks off suddenly, clears his throat, jabs a button and lowers his voice a few notches. "It's twelve minutes past eleven o'clock." He pauses, then leans closer to the microphone, cooing: "I forgot to tell you how nice you look today . . ."

A Connie Francis tune takes over, and Stockton takes a few quick sips of coffee from "Teresa's love cup," a red, white and black mug containing the word "love" in several languages. It was sent in by a listener.

Most of Stockton's followers are housewives, "or homemakers as some of them like to be called," and he tries to gear his program toward them.

FOR ONE THING, he has some respect for his audience. "The average housewife is not the dummy so many people think she is, sitting around changing diapers and yakking on the telephone. She's involved in a lot of things."

Whenever possible, Stockton tries to get involved in these things too, interviewing a meat man, for example, during the recent crunch of high prices and low quantity.

He'll talk about just anything on the air, he says, except the traditional trio of taboos: sex, religion and politics, and one more taboo of his own: his family.

"Nine times out of 10 the listeners could care less about my wife or my kids. Their kids say things just as funny as what my kids say."

Stockton fumbles with his headset (the left ear bringing him the program, the right ear, his music director back at the studio), turns a red dial on the console and glances at the daily program log propped up on a turntable. "Stereo radio ninety-two point seven, you need some good furniture?"

Off the air, Stockton spends his time (what else?) listening to the radio, partly for pleasure, partly to keep up with the business. Sometimes he tunes in AM stations, though he considers them "too commercial, too hyped up, too kiddie"; usually he prefers FM, though it often is nothing more than "elevator background" or the Muzak common in doctors' and dentists' offices.

THE WMM outlook is to "try to fill a void," to bridge the gap between the stations which play the Top Forty and those which specialize in Oldies but Goodies.

The substation at the fair is the first venture outside the studio or the fledgling radio station, and the disc jockeys are taking full advantage of it — interviewing celebrity entertainers at the fair, signing up fairgoers for door prize and bumper sticker drawings and in the process attracting (they hope) more listeners.

"That's quite a flight plan," offers one middle-aged man, peering into the mini-studio from the open doorway. "Yes," Stockton agrees, amidst the abundance of dials and wires, "It is like flying a plane, isn't it?"

Schools awaiting gasoline for buses as opening nears

School starts Tuesday but officials of High School Dist. 211 are still waiting for gasoline to operate the district's school buses.

"We have been assured that we'll have gas," said Dist. 211 business manager James Slater, who said the district has verbal commitments from two suppliers, Bell Finer Fuels in Chicago and Gaure

Oil Co., in Palatine.

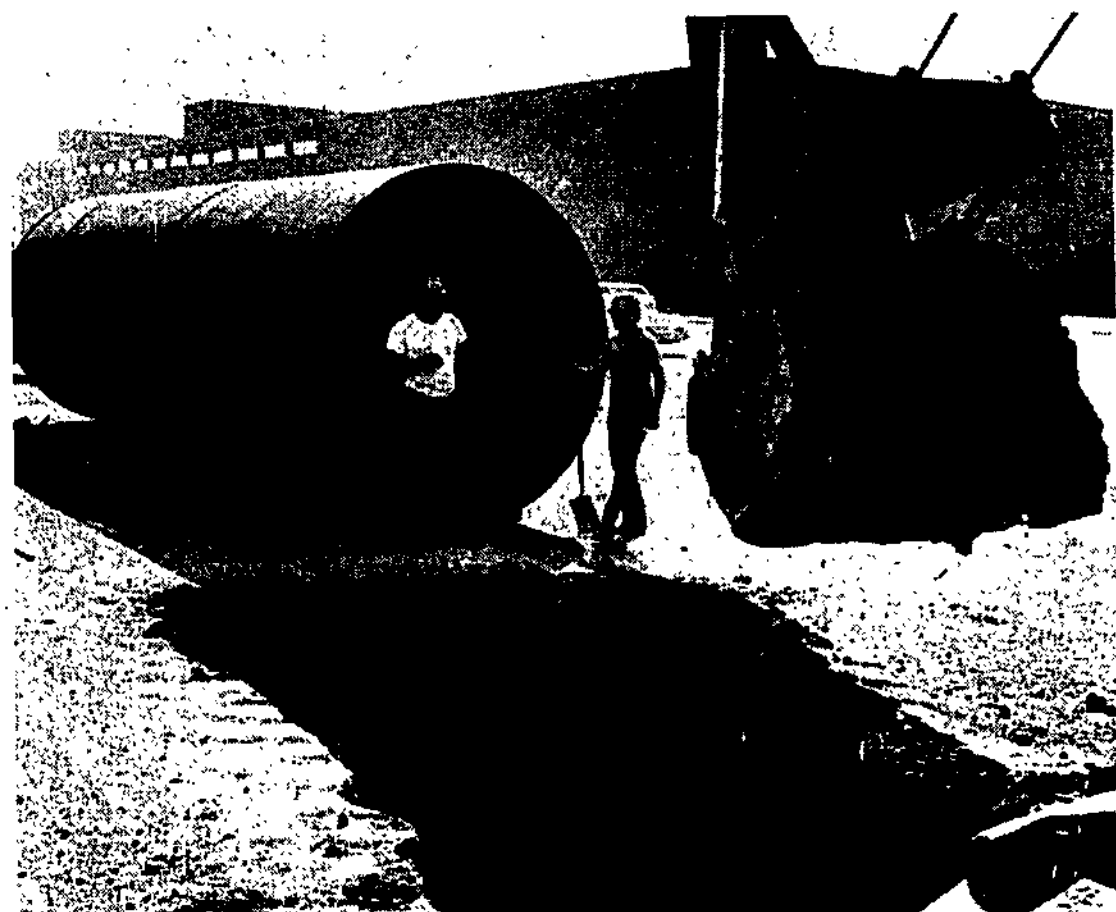

Claude Bailey, director of transportation and driver education at Dist. 211, is getting anxious. The gas supply was supposed to arrive Friday, he said, but it didn't come. Yesterday he said some gas was being delivered and the supplier promised to deliver 8,000 gallons by Sept. 1.

Slater said he isn't worried that the district's 88 buses will roll on Tuesday morning. But, he said, there is a shortage of gasoline and the district won't be able to buy as much gas as it did last year. Both suppliers have promised 90 per cent of last year's allocation.

Teachers will have to cut down on the number of field trips for students to make up the difference, said Slater. If the supply runs short the district will have to make some other cutbacks, he said.

MEANWHILE THREE new gasoline storage tanks that the district recently purchased for $28,000 are empty. Two tanks, one holding 2,000 gallons at Palatine High School, and one for 10,000 gallons at Hoffman Estates High School, were installed underground this summer and a third, holding 10,000 gallons, will be installed at Schaumburg High School.

The tanks were purchased for the sake of efficiency, said Slater. Last year the district had gas tanks at two of the schools, Conant and Fremd high schools. By installing a tank at the other schools, buses will no longer have to be driven to a central location to fill up with gas. The additional tanks will also allow the district to buy gas in greater volume, hopefully at a lower cost, Slater said.

GASOLINE STORAGE tanks were installed this summer at three Dist. 211 high schools in an effort to increase the district's gas storage capacity. But this year, the district has had some trouble getting the gasoline it needs and is still waiting for delivery of the first supply.

New student registration approaching 700 mark

New student registrations in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 are nearing 700.

Summer enrollment of new students was conducted at the E. S. Castor Administration Center until last week. A total of 648 students were registered through Aug. 22. Since that time new student registration has been conducted at the 20 district schools and no figures are available on the size of the enrollment.

The new student enrollment figure is nearly double last year's total of 322 students during this same period.

Supt. Frank Whiteley emphasized the new student enrollment figure does not represent growth to the district because it does not take into account how many students moved out of the district during the summer.

District officials set a growth factor of 400 students when they were planning student assignments for this year. More than half of the new students are expected to be enrolled during the summer and the remainder during the school year.

The actual growth experienced by the school district will not be known until Sept. 11 when sixth day enrollment figures are compiled. The last official enrollment in the district was made May 15 and showed a total enrollment of 12,263 students. If the growth projection for this year is accurate enrollment should be nearly 12,700 students.

Enrollment in the district has leveled off during the past few years because of the completion of many single family developments and slowdown of other types of development within the district.

School open house slated tomorrow

Schools in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 will be open tomorrow from 2 to 3:30 p.m. for student and parent visitation.

The visitations are designed to give parents and students an opportunity to familiarize themselves with the schools and meet teachers.

Palatine Hills Golf Course nets $38,000

The Palatine Hills Golf Course brought in more money in July than any month in its five-year history with the Palatine Park District.

The park district received nearly $38,000 last month from golf course revenues. Last year, the course was plagued with extremely wet weather and few players.

Condominium owners complaining

Wanted: free garbage bags

Who could possibly complain about getting free garbage bags for a year? People who aren't getting them, that's who.

Some Willow Creek condominium owners in Palatine plan to complain to the village board that they're being discriminated against.

While all Palatine homeowners will receive 200 free garbage bags, beginning this fall, as a form of a tax refund, condominium owners, who also pay taxes, won't be getting any.

"All we want is equal treatment," said Al Ruben, president of the board of directors of Willow Creek condominium Unit 2.

Alice Mackin, a member of the Unit 2 board of directors, said yesterday she plans to write a letter on behalf of the 96 families in the building objecting to the trustees' decision to distribute garbage bags to homeowners.

Other condominium owners may take similar action.

Mrs. Mackin noted that condominium owners pay taxes at a higher assessment rate than single family homeowners. The condominiums are assessed at 30 per cent of their market value, and the homes at 22 per cent.

"We're assessed higher than all the rest of them and we're getting less for it," she said.

THE FREE garbage bags will mean a savings of $17.50 a household, based on the current market price of $2.75 for 100 bags. Mrs. Mackin said she thought condominium owners should be given the cash equivalent of the bags.

One trustee, Fred H. Zajonc, warned at the time the board agreed to distribute bags to homeowners that other taxpayers may regard the action as discriminatory. Homeowners account for about 40 per cent of the taxes in Palatine, while businesses, apartment buildings and condominium buildings provide the remaining 60 per cent.

A Herald spotcheck of some local businesses and apartments indicated that most are not even aware of the board's decision and do not plan to protest.

The free garbage bag policy was instituted by newly elected Republican trustees who had promised in their campaign to roll back the local tax rate 7 cents per $100 assessed valuation, to last year's level.

When they took office, however, it was too late to legally change the tax rate, and the trustees concluded that a monetary reimbursement to taxpayers would involve costly paperwork. They opted for free distribution of bags for a year to homeowners instead of a cash tax refund.

Park improvement plan runs 'right on schedule'

Construction of projects approved in last October's Palatine park improvement referendum are continuing on schedule.

The following is a status report of the major projects:

Birchwood Park: The recreation complex, which will feature a swimming pool and gymnasium, is at Illinois and Bennett avenues. Gym footings and foundations have been poured. Workmen are pouring the basement floor this week. Plumbing and electrical work is in progress.

Palatine Trail: Paving of 2.2 miles of the hiking and bicycling trail is completed. The rest of the 4.7-mile route is expected to be constructed by next summer. The trail starts in Maple Park, at Anderson and Winston drives, then continues east-west through parks and Commonwealth Edison Company right of way in the village. When finished, the trail will route bikers into the Palatine Hills golf course and Deer Grove Forest Preserve northwest of Palatine.

Doug Lindberg and Sycamore parks: Each park is seven acres. Doug Lindberg park, at the intersection of Everett and Winston drives, and Sycamore Park, at Clark and Carpenter drives, have walkways and tennis courts paved.

Six small neighborhood parks have been landscaped. Most are located in the Hunting Ridge subdivision. Play equipment has not yet been installed.

Park maintenance building: Three-stall garage addition to existing building at Community Park has overhead doors installed, and electrical work nearly done. Heating installation starts this week, and the final floor slab will be poured next week.

Community Park hard surface area: The multiple-use area near the administration building at 262 E. Palatine Rd. is completed. Remaining work involves striping the play surface and minor cleanup.

Keeper says he won't pay cost for big snake hunt

By JEANNETTE DeWYZE

Although Buffalo Grove officials say they are continuing with plans to bill David Pearson for costs of the recent village snake hunt, the youth stated flatly that he would not pay.

The snake hunt developed Saturday afternoon when Pearson, 18, told police that Seymour, which he described as being a deadly cobra snake, escaped from his residence at 568 Maple Dr.

After three days of frantic search, however, village officials announced that they believed Seymour was a non-poisonous rat snake. Officials based this opinion on testimony from a snake expert who examined a shedded skin which police said came from the escaped snake.

Pearson was unaware of the village getting ready to bill or sue him until contacted by The Herald yesterday.

"I WOULD TAKE it to the highest court I could find," Pearson said when asked about the possibility of the village initiating civil action in the courts to collect the damages.

The decision to attempt to bill Pearson for the search costs came in the form of a resolution which was passed by a 6-0 vote of the village board Monday night.

The resolution states that the village should determine the cost of the search and present a bill to Pearson. In the event Pearson cannot or will not pay the bill, the resolution directs the village attorney to initiate the civil action.

In proposing the resolution, Trustee Thomas Mahoney said he did not think village taxpayers should be forced to pay for a search that was caused by the negligence of one resident.

Pearson said yesterday, however, that he did not feel he had been guilty of any negligence in connection with the snake.

IN DISPUTING THE charge of negligence Pearson said he informed the police that he was keeping the snakes the second day after he received them for safekeeping from Eugene Bowling, a Wheeling friend. This was about a month and a half ago, he said.

He said he invited Buffalo Grove police officer Charles Weidner in to look at the snakes, which included Seymour, two boa snakes and a water snake.

In addition, Pearson said he and Bowling asked Weidner to check on the legality of keeping the snakes. He said he offered to remove the snakes immediately if there was any law prohibiting them or if he was presented by a petition signed by 50 village residents asking for removal of the snakes.

ABOUT A WEEK later the police told Pearson that he could legally keep the snakes, Pearson said. While the police have confirmed the entire incident, police chief Harry Walsh has said that the department was mistakenly acting on "bad advice."

Pearson also said he would refuse to pay for the search costs because he disapproved of the manner in which police conducted the snake hunt.

Pearson said although he had consented to the shoot-to-kill order which police issued, he felt that the shotguns used in the snake hunt were both unnecessary and dangerous. He also said he felt police should not have started the search at the house and then moved outward, as they did, since Pearson said he thought this would tend to drive the snake away.

Although Pearson voiced criticism of the police methods in hunting Seymour, he said Monday that he was following a police recommendation to avoid further public comment on the snake itself. He said the recommendation was aimed at preventing the further spread of public panic over the snake.

THUS, HE REFUSED to comment on whether he thought Seymour was a rat snake or a cobra snake.

He did say, however, that he planned to go with a police officer to a zoo where he could identify a snake which looked like Seymour.

Pearson described the snake as being black, red, and gold.

"I also knew that the snake had a hood, because it tried to bite me a few times," he said.

Village Attorney Richard Raysa yesterday said when he was first consulted about the potential suit against Pearson he had expressed the opinion that the search costs could be recovered. However, Raysa said he was unaware that the police had told the youth the snakes were not illegal.

If further legal research reveals that a suit would be unfeasible, Raysa said he would recommend that the village not prosecute Pearson.

Faced with a disorderly conduct charge and a possible court battle, Pearson said yesterday that his primary concern was still the recovery of the snake.

"I'm just worried about the snake biting someone," he said.

Park board delays action on strict personnel policy

The Palatine Park District board has postponed a decision for the second time on tightening its personnel policy by possibly banning any two family members from working for the district.

The current policy allows two family members to be employed by the district if neither employee is in a supervisory position. The board expected to rule on that policy at Tuesday's meeting, but commissioners delayed any policy-making change until their Sept. 11 meeting.

The tighter policy could mean that a lifeguard's sister might not be able to conduct the park district babysitting class, although their jobs are virtually unrelated.

Board Vice-President Robert Dellamaria said yesterday that he believes the district's policy should be stricter, but he's not sure exactly where to draw the line. Dellamaria said he thinks that no relative of a full-time employee, elected or appointed official should be allowed to work in the district. Why? Because of potential criticism, he said.

People whose children might apply and are not hired by the district could complain that the district was wrongly influenced in hiring someone else, particularly if that someone is related to an employee.

"WHETHER IT was true or not, we're never going to convince someone else of that," Dellamaria said.

The issue surfaced earlier this month, when Tom Jornd, son of park supervisor, Ed Jornd, turned out to be the only qualified candidate for a job opening. Park District Director Fred P. Hall came to the board and asked an exception to the policy to approve Jornd for the job.

At their Tuesday meeting, commissioners authorized Hall to hire Jornd. But they're taking a long, hard look at their overall policy.

Hall, who has no policy-making power, opposes a stricter rule on hiring. He believes that as long as neither family member who is employed by the district has any power to hire, fire or supervise, the dangers of favoritism are slight.

The board has not set any specific guidelines stating who is and isn't affected if a stronger personnel policy is implemented.

Vending machines hit at American Legion

Vending machines were the target of an early morning break-in at Palatine's American Legion Post 690 yesterday.

Police said thieves broke the locks on the cigarette machines, pool table and juke box, and took an unspecified amount of money. Other areas, including the gun room, were apparently searched, but nothing else was discovered missing.

Palatine police believe the thief entered the building through an unlocked window on the east side of the building, at 122 W. Palatine Rd. The break-in occurred between 12:30 a.m. and 6:20 a.m. yesterday.

$1,661 to pay for new street lights

The Palatine Village Board this week appropriated $1,661.20 for six aluminum street light poles and fixtures.

The supply will be used to replace poles as they're knocked out of commission by wayward cars. In most cases, the village is reimbursed for damaged poles by the drivers' insurance companies.

Sunbather bares his, er, soul . . .

Jim Wills bared his soul yesterday afternoon, but his birthday suit was a little too much for Hanover Park police.

Police "pinched" Wills, 50, on charges of disorderly conduct and public indecency after they found him sunning his bare backside in his backyard at 7102 Meadowbrook Dr., Hanover Park.

Two plainclothes detectives were responding to a complaint filed about 2 p.m. at the police station by a citizen.

Wills staged the browning-in-the-buff incident with help from his lawyer, William Stukas. Wills hopes to provide a test case on the question of the legality of nude sunbathing.

The self-proclaimed nude sun bather, who was released on $1,000 bond, is scheduled to appear at 9:30 a.m. Sept. 20 in the Schaumburg branch of the Circuit Court.

ARRESTING OFFICERS said they had been aware of "Mr. Wills' intentions," but added that they did not know the incident would take place until the complaint came to the station. Wills said part of the plans included a specially picked complainant who would walk by and report it to the police.

"I'm doing it primarily from a religious motivation, you might say," Wills said.

"I'm not afraid of getting arrested. Jesus Christ was arrested, and he was right," he added.

Wills, a marketing statistician for a housewares firm, went into his backyard about 2 p.m. The yard is about 50 by 60 feet with a chain-link fence around the perimeter. The neighbors have an unobstructed view of Wills' backyard.

Wills had spread out a white towel in the northeast corner of the yard next to the house. He sat down and talked to his wife who was whispering from a nearby window.

He waited a minute, and then gingerly slipped his pants off. He lay with only the backside exposed.

HE SAID HE WAS not really embar-

assed to take his clothes off, but added, "If there was a group of 30 or 40 persons along the fence yelling and screaming, then it might be a little embarrassing."

A neighbor couple did not seem to take note of Wills' nude body, but a few minutes later a female voice called out. "Apparently, it doesn't bother you that I have two teen-aged girls out here."

The detectives then walked through the backyard gate and advised Wills of his constitutional rights. Wills put on his clothes, was handcuffed and taken to the police station for booking procedures.

Wills said he at one time had opposed pornography in Chicago. He added that his life took a 180-degree turn when he had an "awakening" one night.

"I was sleeping one night. And I thought, 'Who is higher than the Supreme Court? God of course,' and God made us nude when we were born. The Bible does not say nudity is bad," Wills, who says he is a religious man, added.

He recalled that his wife and his oldest daughter were somewhat against his intentions and that his youngest daughter "had a freer mind."

"I've gone nude sun-bathing in DuPage County. I have my place," he said. "I'm not doing it (protesting) just for myself, but for a cause."

AS COMPARED TO topless and bottomless bars, adult magazines and movies and nude bathing beaches around the world, he said nude sun bathing is nothing.

"There's nothing wrong with nudity. And there's nothing wrong with sunbathing," Wills said. "Two rights make a third right."

Mrs. Peggy Troccoli, 7097 Edgebrook Lane, a neighbor, said, "I was shocked. I was dumbfounded. I was certainly not happy with my teen-aged girls back there."

13 city officials plan to attend municipal meet

by TONI GINETTI

At least 13 Rolling Meadows officials, and in most cases their spouses as well, have made plans to attend the Illinois Municipal League Conference in Chicago next month.

Expenses for the officials will probably cost the city about $3,300, but the total expense for the three-day conference could be higher if other city officials decide within the next two weeks to also attend the conference.

'Great movies' theme for water show

"Memories of Great Movies" is the theme of the Rolling Meadows Park District water show at 8:30 tonight at the park district pool, 3900 Owl Dr.

Highlighting the show will be swimming performances to "Cabaret," "South Pacific," "Midnight Cowboy" and "M*A*S*H."

Admission is 25 cents. In case of rain, the water show will be held Friday at 8:30 p.m.

School open house slated tomorrow

Schools in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 will be open tomorrow from 2 to 3:30 p.m. for student and parent visitation.

The visitations are designed to give parents and students an opportunity to familiarize themselves with the schools and meet teachers.

Most of the officials who have advised City Manager James Watson's office they will attend the Sept. 14 to Sept. 17 affair have made reservations to stay at the Conrad Hilton Hotel, where the conference will be held.

Watson said he plans to attend only one day of the conference, the Saturday session. Mayor Roland J. Meyer said yesterday he may be out of town at the time of the conference. If he does attend, Meyer said he will probably only be present at several of the sessions.

The city council last month passed a resolution which gives a $300 expense account to each city official and spouse attending the conference and a $200 expense account for each official who attends the conference alone.

At least 11 of the 13 officials who plan to attend are expected to be accompanied by their spouses, Mrs. Houldsworth said.

IN ADDITION to Meyer and Watson, those registered to attend the conference are Ald. Thomas Scanlan (1st) and his wife, Ald. William Ahrens (2nd) and his wife, Ald. Thomas Waldron (2nd) and his wife, Ald. Stephen Eberhard (3rd) and his wife, Ald. Daniel Weber (4th) and his wife, Mrs. Houldsworth and her husband, Health Officer John Schultz and his wife, Police and Fire Commissioner Rudolf Bulek and his wife, City Engineer James Muldowney and his wife, Ald. James Huddleston (4th) and his wife, and Ald. Kenneth Retzke (5th) and his wife.

Based on the number of officials attending, the city will probably spend about $3,300 to pay for the 11 couples. In addition, $350 has also been appropriated by the council for a hotel hospitality room and refreshments for city representatives during the conference.

648 new students register

New student registrations in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 are nearing 700.

Summer enrollment of new students was conducted at the E. S. Castor Administration Center until last week. A total of 648 students were registered through Aug. 22. Since that time new student registration has been conducted at the 20 district schools and no figures are available on the size of the enrollment.

The new student enrollment figure is nearly double last year's total of 322 students during this same period.

Supt. Frank Whiteley emphasized the new student enrollment figure does not represent growth to the district because it does not take into account how many students moved out of the district during the summer.

District officials set a growth factor of 400 students when they were planning student assignments for this year. More than half of the new students are expected to be enrolled during the summer and the remainder during the school year.

The actual growth experienced by the school district will not be known until Sept. 11 when sixth day enrollment figures are compiled. The last official enrollment in the district was made May 15 and showed a total enrollment of 12,263 students. If the growth projection for this year is accurate enrollment should be nearly 12,700 students.

Enrollment in the district has leveled off during the past few years because of the completion of many single family developments and slowdown of other types of development within the district.

Lt. Ted Loesch named acting city fire chief Rolling Meadows Fire Lt. Ted Loesch has been named acting fire chief of the city fire department by Mayor Roland Meyer.

Meyer said yesterday he made the appointment after consulting with aldermen and City Atty. Donald Rose. Rose told Meyer the appointment did not require city council approval because it is only an acting appointment.

Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty is in Northwest Community Hospital recuperating from a heart attack suffered two weeks ago.

Loesch is one of three department lieutenants who have been running the department in Fogarty's absence. Meyer said all three lieutenants, Loesch, Charles Sellards, and Roger Mueller, are equally qualified to head operations temporarily. Meyer said he decided to choose one of the three "to give direction" to the department until Fogarty is able to return.

Meyer said he expects Fogarty to return to full-time duties following his recuperation. He said, however, that doctors have indicated Fogarty may require three to four weeks of recuperation at home after his release from the hospital, which is expected to come in 10 days to two weeks.

"I'm not afraid of getting arrested. Jesus Christ was arrested, and he was right," he added.

Willis, a marketing statistician for a housewares firm, went into his backyard about 2 p.m. The yard is about 50 by 60 feet with a chain-link fence around the perimeter. The neighbors have an unobstructed view of Willis' backyard.

Willis had spread out a white towel in the northeast corner of the yard next to the house. He sat down and talked to his wife who was whispering from a nearby window.

He waited a minute, and then gingerly slipped his pants off. He lay with only the backside exposed.

HE SAID HE WAS not really embar-

assed to take his clothes off, but added, "If there was a group of 30 or 40 persons along the fence yelling and screaming, then it might be a little embarrassing."

A neighbor couple did not seem to take note of Willis' nude body, but a few minutes later a female voice called out, "Apparently, it doesn't bother you that I have two teen-aged girls out here."

The detectives then walked through the backyard gate and advised Willis of his constitutional rights. Willis put on his clothes, was handcuffed and taken to the police station for booking procedures.

Willis said he at one time had opposed pornography in Chicago. He added that his life took a 180-degree turn when he had an "awakening" one night.

"I was sleeping one night. And I thought, 'Who is higher than the Supreme Court? God of course, and God made us nude when we were born. The Bible does not say nudity is bad,'" Willis, who says he is a religious man, added.

He recalled that his wife and his oldest daughter were somewhat against his intentions and that his youngest daughter "had a freer mind."

"I've gone nude sun-bathing in DuPage County. I have my place," he said. "I'm not doing it (protesting) just for myself, but for a cause."

AS COMPARED TO topless and bottomless bars, adult magazines and movies and nude bathing beaches around the world, he said nude sun bathing is nothing.

"There's nothing wrong with nudity. And there's nothing wrong with sunbathing," Willis said. "Two rights make a third right."

Mrs. Peggy Troccoli, 7097 Edgebrook Lane, a neighbor, said, "I was shocked. I was dumbfounded. I was certainly not happy with my teen-aged girls back there."

Study committee outlines takeover of fire district

by STIRLING MORITA

The proposed village takeover of the Hoffman Estates Fire Department took another bound forward last night.

Members of a joint village-fire district committee studying recommendations for a municipal fire department quickly drafted a joint statement. The statement will go before the Hoffman Estates village board at its meeting Tuesday night and the board of trustees for the Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District Sept. 10.

The fire protection district subcommittee and the village subcommittee were in solid agreement that a municipal fire department should be put into operation as soon as possible.

The statement said the best long-range interests of the community would be served because of uniform fire protection for the entire village and greater financial resources to fund the department.

Liabilities and assets of the fire protection district would be assumed by the village under the takeover.

THE STATEMENT recommended, in order of priority, the following steps:

- Disannex the area presently served by the Palatine Rural Fire Protection District.
- Construct another fire station in the Howie-in-the-Hills area.
- Assume liabilities and assets of the fire protection district.
- Establish the municipal department.
- Disannex areas presently served by the Bartlett-Countryside Fire Protection District and the East Dundee Fire Protection District.

This differs from priorities listed in the report made by National Loss Control Service Corp. of Long Grove.

William Brilliant, president of the fire protection district's board of trustees, said the listed order of priorities would maintain fire protection in areas presently served by the district but not in the boundaries of the village. Service would be assured to those areas until another arrangement could be made.

BRILLIANT ADDED that the budget for 1976 for full-time and volunteer personnel could be more than $750,000.

The statement also advises that an additional ambulance would be required when the third fire station is completed. It mentioned the possible need for sophisticated fire-fighting equipment for use in high-rise buildings.

The three fire stations are needed to assure protection for persons south of the Northwest Tollway, the statement said. The National Loss Corp. report had advised abandoning construction of the third fire station, and if that was impossible, the closing of fire station number 2, because of their proximity to each other.

Volunteer and full-time personnel should be maintained and upgraded as needed, the statement added.

It was recommended to retain the mutual aid response program with the Schaumburg fire department.

The statement said the National Loss report was vague in its recommendation that police and fire dispatching facilities be consolidated. The statement opposed the consolidation.

GASOLINE STORAGE tanks were installed this summer at three Dist. 211 high schools in an effort to increase the district's gas storage capacity. But this year, the district has had some trouble getting the gasoline it needs and is still waiting for delivery of the first supply.

Paper shortage feared in schools here

Remember when kids ran to school with a blackboard slate under their arm and chalk clutched in their hands? It's a scene from the past.

It could happen in Schaumburg Township Wednesday when School Dist. 54 opens the doors at 24 schools.

Only half the usual paper supply Dist. 54 ordered for the school year was delivered, and administrators say they fear a paper shortage.

Joe Viso, director of buildings and grounds, said the district, with approximately 14,000 students, uses about 25,000 reams of paper a school year. Although the school does not supply students with paper, many of their work sheets are ditto machine or mimeographed tests supplied by the schools.

"We will use every inch of available space on a sheet of paper," said Viso. Administrators said they will attempt to use as little paper as possible.

This doesn't mean an end to written homework assignments. Students will just be asked to write on both sides of the paper.

Viso said the district's suppliers make no promises about eventual delivery and we are going to ration the supply we have.

Schools still await gasoline for buses

School starts Tuesday but officials of High School Dist. 211 are still waiting for gasoline to operate the district's school buses.

"We have been assured that we'll have gas," said Dist. 211 business manager James Slater, who said the district has verbal commitments from two suppliers, Bell Fuel Fuels in Chicago and Gaere Oil Co., in Palatine.

Claude Bailey, director of transportation and driver education at Dist. 211, is getting anxious. The gas supply was supposed to arrive Friday, he said, but it didn't come. Yesterday he said some gas was being delivered and the supplier promised to deliver 8,000 gallons by Sept. 1.

Slater said he isn't worried that the district's 88 buses will roll on Tuesday morning. But, he said, there is a shortage of gasoline and the district won't be able to buy as much gas as it did last year. Both suppliers have promised 90 per cent of last year's allocation.

Teachers will have to cut down on the number of field trips for students to make up the difference, said Slater. If the supply runs short the district will have to make some other cutbacks, he said.

MEANWHILE THREE new gasoline storage tanks that the district recently purchased for $28,000 are empty. Two tanks, one holding 2,000 gallons at Palatine High School, and one for 10,000 gallons at Hoffman Estates High School, were installed underground this summer and a third, holding 10,000 gallons, will be installed at Schaumburg High School.

The tanks were purchased for the sake of efficiency, said Slater. Last year the district had gas tanks at two of the schools, Conant and Fremd high schools.

Two appointments approved

Appointments to the Hoffman Estates Plan Commission and Public Information Committee were confirmed by the village board Monday night.

William Palmer, 333 Baxter Ln., is to join the plan commission. Palmer is a sales representative for north Cook County with Lyon Metal Products, a firm he has worked for since 1964. He was a member of the 1973 Fourth of July Committee and Octoberfest committees, and also is a member of Barbershop Singers, Masons and Medina Shrine. Palmer is a precinct captain and area chairman for Republican Organization of Schaumburg Township (ROOST), and as such is a member of the ROOST executive board.

Nancy Korzeniewski, 324 Nottingham Ln., was named to the public information committee. She is employed in sales for the Quinlan and Tyson real estate firm, and has been active in League of Women Voters, FISH, St. Hubert's Women's Club, PTA, Girl and Cub Scouts. She also listed on her resume applying for the committee her membership in ROOST.

All current members of the village board were elected on ROOST slates.

Knightsbridge residents charge builder neglect

by PAT GERLACH

Owners of the $80,000 to $100,000 custom-built homes in Schaumburg's Knightsbridge continue to be concerned about the lack of work on public improvements in the subdivision.

They feel that Nick Herman, who built their homes, is not completing his part of the bargain in providing public improvements in the subdivision. Concern centers on improperly graded lots, lack of parkway fill, failure to install street lights and parkway trees and completion of a pond and park area.

Herman completed final grading on all but two lots in the development in June. But he has been seen there rarely since that time, residents said.

Residents believe their only hope is the village, which they feel has lent a disinterested ear to the problems.

BILL BIBO, president of Knightsbridge Homeowners Association, sent a letter to Mayor Robert O. Atcher on Aug. 16 suggesting a plan of action for solving problems in the subdivision be prepared by village officials within two weeks.

"While I feel that something must be done, it is only fair to allow sufficient time for the village to respond," Bibo said. He stressed that he was speaking for the homeowners' association but indicated that individual homeowners are also free to pursue any other course of action they may prefer.

"Knightsbridge is not being neglected," Village Administrator John Coste said yesterday.

Coste told of a "long telephone conversation" with Bibo and a personal meeting the day the letter was written. He said Atcher replied in writing to Bibo answering as many questions as could be satisfied at that time.

COSTE SAID Trustee Raymond Kessel has made himself available to Knightsbridge residents on a continuing basis to listen to problems and try to help with solutions.

Coste also told of meeting with Herman last week when the builder promised that a sidewalk along Jones Road leading to Churchill School promised when the subdivision was approved, will be installed by the time school opens.

Concerning the lack of public improvements, Coste said the village holds a $75,000 performance bond posted by Herman which "would more than do the job. But this money cannot be used in any fashion on private property."

"Everything that the village has — the performance bond, inspection reports, a Metropolitan Sanitary District permit for the retention pond and occupancy permits — all records are a matter of public record and are available at the clerk's office at all times to anyone who is interested," Coste said.

He was referring to residents who recently expressed doubt that these documents exist and are on file in the village.

RESIDENTS HAVE asked that Prince Charles Road, one of two major streets in the development, be paved in final form. Coste says this cannot be done until units three and four are completed because the road provides access to construction areas.

Last April the village approved units three and four of the subdivision but refused to grant building permits to Herman until problems in the first two units had been rectified.

"All streets in Knightsbridge are village streets and have been recorded as such," Coste added regarding to residents claims that Schaumburg has not yet assumed responsibility for their streets.

Coste admitted that building code violations had been discovered in Knightsbridge but not to the extent residents claim.

"ANY PROBLEMS that are other than code violations probably constitute a breach of contract between owners and Nick Herman," Coste observed.

Any owners who cannot get Herman to solve problems in their houses may initiate legal action in which the village will join, he added.

"But, as the offended party, the owner must be the one who initiates the action," he said.

Herman could not be reached for comment.

Village won't recognize state authority on employe firings

by NANCY COWGER

The Village of Hoffman Estates yesterday refused to recognize the jurisdiction of the Illinois Department of Labor in a dispute with 28 former public works employees.

While the village refused to participate in the first fact-finding hearing involving municipal labor relations in the department's history, the former employees presented roughly six hours of testimony. One of their witnesses gave the first public indication of a break in the solidarity of the village board on the firing of 28 men.

At the opening of the hearing, Village Atty. Edward Hofert informed Hearing Officer Donald Johnson, administrative assistant in the labor department that the village denied the department's authority to investigate municipal labor relations. Referring to statutes creating and outlining powers of the department, Hofert said they "do not apply to municipal corporations, home rule corporations and agencies of state government."

ALTHOUGH JOHNSON and Richard Schnadig, legal advisor to the department, disputed Hofert's claim and "strongly request (ed)" the village participate, Hofert still refused. While Johnson has said he has power to subpoena witnesses, no village officials were subpoenaed.

However, later in the proceedings, Village Clerk Helen Wozniak testified in response to comments on a petition urging the village board to mediate the dispute after it had fired the men.

Among witnesses called by the employees, members of Local 2041 of the American Association of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO, was John Hansen, president of the Schaumburg Education Association. Hansen related a phone call he made to Trustee Ralph Lyerla in which he said Lyerla told him he did not agree with the July 21 massive firings.

Hansen said he called Lyerla Aug. 6 to learn the trustee's position on the labor dispute, and appealed to Lyerla as a fellow teacher to reconsider board action on specific points of a contract that had been proposed. Lyerla teaches in Niles Township High School North.

LYERLA SAID he could do nothing about the firings since the board had given all its authority in dealing with the public works men to Mayor Virginia Hayter, recalled Hansen. Lyerla also said "he did not necessarily agree with Mrs. Hayter's decision to fire" the men, said Hansen. Lyerla indicated he would instead have told the union men to "take or leave" the village's contract offer "but that he wouldn't fire them."

Lyerla is out of town and could not be reached last night for comment.

Other testimony related the employees' version of events leading to a July 19 strike by the men; alleged threats against employees because of their union activity, dating back to a year ago; attempts by local clergymen and agents from other unions to convince the village to mediate the dispute, and conduct of employees and village board members at two board meetings.

As the employees and their attorney Gilbert Cornfield noted the men attempted to prove with their testimony the board negotiated the proposed contract in bad faith, having reached a decision at some point during negotiations that it would break the union. They also tried to prove they had made every possible attempt to obtain third party mediation of the dispute.

Newman Black, 54, of 220 S. Roselle Rd., was released after emergency treatment at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

Firefighters were summoned to the filtration room about 9:20 a.m. Black was entering the room to add chlorine to the pool's water system when he discovered a small fire in a cardboard container for chlorine powder, fire officials said.

Trustees anger Timbercrest group

Timbercrest residents are angry at not having received prior notice by Schaumburg trustees on their consideration Tuesday of changes in a Mor-Well Builders plan which will affect them.

The village board this week approved changes in the planned development which will permit Mor-Well to construct condominiums rather than apartment units on Schaumburg Road just west of Town Square Shopping Center.

Bob Mead, 201 Sumac Ln., said yesterday that Mayor Robert O. Atcher personally promised Mead would be notified of any meeting between the village and the builder.

In March the village board refused to act on Mor-Well's proposed changes until all deficiencies in the Timbercrest subdivision had been satisfied.

Mead and other Timbercrest residents objected to the three and five-story buildings being planned by Mor-Well for the Schaumburg Road site at that time and when the development was first proposed more than three years ago.

"Now I find a five-story building is going up 140 feet from the corner of my lot and I didn't even know the board would be talking to the builder this week," Mead said.

A SPOKESMAN in the mayor's office said she was not aware of Atcher's promise to inform Mead of the meeting. The Mor-Well subject had been scheduled for the Sept. 11 board meeting but was moved up when it was learned that Village Atty. Jack Siegel would not be present. It had been decided to postpone consideration of a Levitt & Sons proposal, previously scheduled for Tuesday, the spokesman said.

Bill Meyer, homeowners association president, said he had not been told of the Mor-Well issue being on Tuesday's agenda. Meyer said he has not yet had an opportunity to learn whether other homeowners' association officers were informed.

"I would have liked the village to give us a better readout on the punch list (problems to have been solved) . . . I'm not sure it was up to date," Meyer said.

Meyer said he does not "like to read politics into the situation . . . but honestly, I do."

"The overwhelming vote for someone here, who was not one of the incumbents is food for thought," he commented referring to Carol Johnson, a Timbercrest resident who ran as an independent in the April village election. Though she lost Mrs. Johnson received about 1,000 votes.

MEYER FEELS "communications has become a one-way street" for Timbercrest residents. "If we don't call them (the village), they won't call us," he said.

Village Administrator John Coste said his office sends out a village calendar to homeowners' associations, newspapers and civic groups but does not mail agendas. "That," Coste said, "is the responsibility of the village clerk."

Clerk Sandy Carsello could not be reached for comment late yesterday.

Coste pointed out, however, that action taken Tuesday is not final. "All the board did was approve the change from rentals to condominiums and altered the bedroom mix slightly," he explained.

Mor-Well must come back to the village for phase one approval before building permits can be issued, he said.

Mechanic shot eight times

by JOHN MAES

A Des Plaines man was in satisfactory condition yesterday at Holy Family Hospital after being shot eight times at close range by his roommate Tuesday night, according to police.

Peter Kilen, 29, of 910 Beau Dr., was in intensive care yesterday afternoon, a hospital spokesman said. He had been shot in the jaw, chest and hand.

Kilen's roommate, Antal Schmidt, 29, was arrested minutes after the shooting. Associate Judge Marvin J. Peters ordered Schmidt, a Hungarian immigrant, taken to Cook County Jail on $25,000 bond early yesterday. He has been charged by Des Plaines police with attempted murder and aggravated battery.

The shooting stemmed from previous arguments between the two over the use of an automobile they shared, police said. The two worked together as auto mechanics at Laurel Motors, 280 E. Ogden Ave., in Westmont and had been living together in the Des Plaines apartment for about four months.

The incident occurred about 6:30 p.m. Police said Schmidt began shooting at his roommate immediately after Kilen returned from a shopping trip carrying bags of groceries.

Police said they were alerted by a building resident who was aroused by the gunshots. Several other residents also told police they were startled by the shots.

Police, who arrived on the scene about a minute later, nabbed Schmidt as he walked onto a terrace outside the first-floor apartment.

Police said they found Kilen's body lying on the floor of an adjacent apartment, after following a trail of blood from the terrace near where Kilen was shot.

He had apparently staggered into the next apartment through the terrace door in search of help before he fell, while the residents had run into the hall through the front door to investigate the gunshots, police said.

An automatic pistol, used in the shooting as well as a shotgun propped against a sofa were found during a police search of Schmidt's apartment, according to reports. Police had not learned yesterday afternoon if the guns were registered.

Candy sale to kick off

Saturday, Sept. 1 has been set as the kick-off date for Schaumburg Boys Football candy sale. The football organization is a division of Schaumburg Athletic Association.

"Over 300 boys and 100 cheerleaders will be selling candy for the football program's major fund raising event," said Jim Tierney, fund raising chairman.

Candy will be sold at $1 per box on a door-to-door canvass of the Schaumburg area through the month of September.

The Almanac

Today is Thursday, Aug. 30, the 242nd day of 1973 with 123 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter.

The morning stars are Mercury and Mars.

The evening stars are Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Virgo.

American song writer George Root was born Aug. 30, 1820.

On this day in history:

In 30 B.C. Cleopatra committed suicide by permitting a snake to bite her.

In 1932, Herman Goering, often referred to as the No. 2 Nazi, was elected president of the German Reichstag.

In 1963, Casey Stengel stepped out of baseball, after a major league career of more than four decades, when he retired as manager of the New York Mets.

It was also noticed during the search that some bedroom furniture had been overturned and a telephone had been ripped from the wall, according to reports. Schmidt had reportedly stayed home from work that day.

State's attorneys had difficulty questioning Schmidt Tuesday night. The suspect had been in the U.S. about three years and speaks little English. He is not a U.S. citizen.

Schmidt will be returned to Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court for a hearing Sept. 6.

No appeal coming on NMAD action

Schaumburg will not appeal a Circuit Court decision handed down allowing Northwest Mosquito Abatement District (NMAD) to continue its spraying in the village.

Though absent from this week's village board meeting, Village Atty. Jack Siegel suggested in a letter that further appeal might not be successful.

Schaumburg and Palatine entered into a law suit in 1971 in an attempt to enjoin NMAD from using malathion and other pesticides which were then considered "environmentally harmful."

In other action Tuesday, trustees instructed Siegel to prepare an amendment to the village ordinance establishing some new licensing fees.

Categories to be added to the licensing ordinance include private ambulances, with a fee of $35; public swimming pools (with the exception of Schaumburg Park District pools), with a fee of $50 for outdoor facilities and $100 for indoor pools, and nursing homes, with a $100 fee. All fees are paid annually.

Adjustments are also being made in licensing fees for vending machines increasing the cost to a minimum of $30 and a maximum of $100. These fees are based on prices charged for items in the machines, according to Trustee Denis Ledgerwood, finance chairman.

Fees for banks and savings and loan associations will be increased from $15 to $30 and contractors licenses will go up from $15 to $35 under the revisions.

First reading of the ordinance is scheduled for the Sept. 11 village board meeting.

Mount Shire liquor case— an unusual one

by TOM VAN MALDER
A news analyst

Liquor license hearings can, on occasion, bring out crowds of very concerned citizens to Mount Prospect Village Board of Trustees meetings.

And current hearings on a requested club or general bar license for the Mount Shire Club, 1841 W. Golf Road have done just that—bring out the crowds.

However, there is a difference this time. Not only are some citizens coming to complain, but another group is coming to speak in favor of granting the license.

As in most liquor license cases heard in the village, neighboring homeowners have emerged to protest the granting of any license.

It has been, however, very rare for a liquor license request to capture the interest of the whole community. And village ministers stopped speaking against liquor licenses at board meetings in the early 1960s.

What makes the Mount Shire case different is that the license is sought for a club used by the tenants of Salvatore DiMucci's Mount Shire Apartments, and the tenants want to be able to drink in their club.

The club was operated as a bottle club, with members bringing their own liquor or buying bottles through the club operators, until Cook County Sheriff's police and local police arrested two club employees last month for sale of beer without state or local liquor licenses. Since then, DiMucci has closed the club and asked the village for a license.

THERE ARE now 20 liquor licenses in the village covering bars, restaurants, package stores and clubs. Another license was recently approved for a restaurant at Randhurst Shopping Center but it will not be issued until the restaurant is built. In 1957, there were only five liquor licenses.

Yet while the number of licenses has grown from five to 20, the village's population has grown from less than 20,000 to 46,400. Almost every village administration has insisted each license request be considered on its own merit, although most have considered a larger population as ample justification for more licenses.

Throughout the years, only three licenses have caused any general controversy. They were for Meeske's Super Market, Butch McGuire's Pub and Farmer Cooper's Restaurant.

When Meeske's sought its license to sell beer and wine in packages only, many people objected because they felt a precedent would be set. Meeske's was the first grocery store to request a license.

In March, 1962, a license was created for the store. The license eventually became a full liquor license and then was abandoned completely when Meeske's found the selling of liquor to be too much of a bother.

In 1968 and 1969, a general uproar resulted from the request of Farmer Cooper's on Kensington Road for a beer and wine license. After several attempts, Cooper never managed to get a license.

ACCORDING TO Mayor Robert D. Telchert, who was a village trustee at the time, Cooper was defeated not because his few neighbors objected (as they did) but because the license became a political issue.

When Cooper asked to open his restaurant he did not seek commercial zoning but rather a variation for the residential zoning he already had. Part of the agreement granting that variation was that liquor could never be sold on the property.

Until recently, liquor never has been sold there. But last June after a rezoning a license was granted to Danny's Barn, a new restaurant on the same Farmer Cooper site.

The third battle was over the Butch McGuire's license in 1969. Telchert said the battle was pointless because the tavern already had a license from the county prior to annexation, and by law the village had to honor that license by granting a village license. Yet telephone calls and letters deluged the village board during the time of the hearings.

Butch McGuire's got the license.

The number of now liquor licenses has increased at a fairly steady pace the last few years. There were three new licenses each year in 1969 and 1970. In 1971, only two new licenses were issued, and there were four in 1972. (One of the 1972 licenses was to sell imported wines in a store at Randhurst).

This year the board has created two licenses and approved a third for the Randhurst restaurant.

IT IS DOUBTFUL whether the board will create a license for the Mount Shire Club. Four board members have already said they feel the club should continue to operate as a bottle club, if liquor is to continue to be consumed on the premises. And the chance of the license becoming a village-wide issue also appears doubtful, although DiMucci's name is one that often creates interest within the community.

The board has postponed action for two reasons—to find out if the club has to have a license to operate as a bottle club, and to have a full board present for the decision. Telchert said a decision will probably be made in September.

A FAMILIAR REFLECTION of summer in Mount Prospect is the annual street repaving work. This year 12 miles of streets were done in the largest such project undertaken. All the new blacktopping is complete, with only spot checks of the work left to be done. The streets to be done were chosen by the village board. The $158,744 project, $56,000 less than village estimates, was done by Leininger-Midstates Paving Co. of Hinsdale.

Letter fails to calm residents

Maryville protest expected to continue

by LINDA PUNCH

A parents' group opposing the Maryville School site will continue their protest despite an explanatory letter distributed by River Trails Dist. 26 administrators.

Karen Zuck, representing the committee for reconsideration of the school site, said she was not satisfied with the explanation given in the letter.

"I still don't think the board made a sound judgment on the site. First they made the decision, then they hear the dissent," she said. "To me, it's backwards as to the way Retzlaff (Dist. 26 acting superintendent) says he's doing it."

The parents group—formed after the board voted to place a new school for Maryville students on the River Trails Junior High School site—presented a list of questions concerning the site to board members at the Aug. 21 meeting. The five questions dealt with requests for copies of the educational specifications, a building site description for the junior high and a freeze on any work currently in progress on the new school.

THE COMMITTEE also asked for answers on questions about the facilities of the new building and about purchase negotiations for a school site. Also requested was information on who will pay for bus service for the Maryville students, whether the new school will serve all district children and whether the state demanded that the Maryville site be located at the junior high.

In the nine-page letter, mailed to Dist. 26 parents earlier this week, Acting Supt. James Retzlaff denied rumors the new facility would include a stadium and swimming pool. He also denied the contention the district "will initiate a program of integrating district students" into the new building.

In response to parents' fears that Dist. 26 staff members would not be able to contain "these problem children," Retzlaff said he has "too much faith and trust in the abilities of staff and administration... to concede that suddenly they will be unable to cope with the future education of these students."

Commenting on Retzlaff's statement,

Mrs. Zuck said "It's not the staff I distrust."

"IT'S THE administrators and board members I worry about," she said. "I think there has been a double standard at the junior high school as far as discipline is concerned."

Mrs. Zuck also expressed fears that the board will become "so wrapped up with this showplace (Maryville school)", they will neglect other schools in the district.

She also objected to Retzlaff's "labeling us as being against Maryville children."

"We want what's best for the children also—all of the children," she said.

Mrs. Zuck said a recent communication from the state Office of Public Instruction said 27 acres was the "ideal size" for a junior high school site. She noted that the River Trails site is only 12 acres.

The parents committee will be distributing fliers encouraging parents to attend the Sept. 4 meeting of the school board. Board members said they will explain their choice of sites for the Maryville school at the meeting.

"The board stated at their last meeting they want to be truly responsive to the community's wishes," Mrs. Zuck said. "We want our thoughts to be known to the board."

More than 100 Anne Fox Elementary School parents recently signed a petition demanding a half hour hot lunch program be provided for their children this school year.

Mrs. Louise Cannizzo of Hanover Park who carried the petition in front of Fox during book fee registration yesterday said it will be presented to the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 board Sept. 6.

She said supporters of the petition want the district to include Fox in a trial lunch program adopted for a few district schools in July.

Earlier plans included Fox in the proposal but the one adopted by the board dropped the school.

Officials said there was no specific reason for dropping Fox.

Special features for Maryville school

by LINDA PUNCH

The new Maryville school will be designed specifically for "socially maladjusted and culturally deprived" youngsters with "varying degrees of emotional instability."

According to education specifications drawn up by the River Trails School Dist. 26 administration, the school will need more specialized features than a regular elementary school because of the distinctive needs of the children.

In addition to the usual primary, intermediate and junior high classrooms, the specifications call for exceptional education rooms, vocational education rooms, physical education facilities and areas for privacy and isolation.

The exceptional education rooms are needed to meet the needs of children with learning disabilities, mentally retarded youngsters and children with emotional problems.

Because the youngsters attending the Maryville school will need individualized instruction, the building will need 20 classrooms large enough to house eight students each. The school would include four primary, eight intermediate (4-5-6) and eight junior high rooms.

SINCE MARYVILLE students spend most of their time in an institution "with huge rooms, ... open dormitories and ... forbidden surroundings," the report recommends the architects design a "homey, comfortable, inviting quiet" building.

The report also suggests the building be flexible enough to include areas for small and large group activities, resource areas and tutorial space.

Offices for a social worker, psychologist, nurse and counselor are called for in the specifications. A testing room and conference room are also included. Suggestions for the vocational education area include space for home economics, industrial arts, arts and crafts.

Dist. 26 administrators asked for a physical education facility consisting of a multi-purpose room and locker-shower area. A small therapy pool would also be included.

Included in the specifications is a request for two padded isolation rooms in the counseling area for youngsters "in an overwrought state of mind."

Noting that the Maryville youngsters value privacy very highly, the report recommends that private areas in the form of partitions, room dividers and study carrels be installed in each classroom.

Dist. 26 acting Supt. James Retzlaff said educational specifications are recommendations the administrators would like included in the building. He said the final building plan will not necessarily contain all the items requested.

Sunbather bares his, er, soul . . .

by STIRLING MORITA

Jim Wills bared his soul yesterday afternoon, but his birthday suit was a little too much for Hanover Park police.

Police "pinched" Wills, 50, on charges of disorderly conduct and public indecency after they found him sunning his bare backside in his backyard at 7102 Meadowbrook Dr., Hanover Park.

Two plainclothes detectives were responding to a complaint filed about 2 p.m. at the police station by a citizen.

Wills staged the browning-in-the-buff incident with help from his lawyer, William Stukas. Wills hopes to provide a test case on the question of the legality of nude sunbathing.

The self-proclaimed nude sun bather, who was released on $1,000 bond, is scheduled to appear at 9:30 a.m. Sept. 20 in the Schaumburg branch of the Circuit Court.

ARRESTING OFFICERS said they had been aware of "Mr. Wills' intentions," but added that they did not know the incident would take place until the complainant came to the station. Wills said part of the plans included a specially picked complainant who would walk by and report it to the police.

"I'm doing it primarily from a religious motivation, you might say," Wills said.

"I'm not afraid of getting arrested. Jesus Christ was arrested, and he was right," he added.

Wills, a marketing statistician for a housewares firm, went into his backyard about 2 p.m. The yard is about 50 by 60 feet with a chain-link fence around the perimeter. The neighbors have an unobstructed view of Wills' backyard.

Wills had spread out a white towel in the northeast corner of the yard next to the house. He sat down and talked to his wife who was whispering from a nearby window.

He waited a minute, and then gingerly slipped his pants off. He lay with only the backside exposed.

HE SAID HE WAS not really embarrassed to take his clothes off, but added, "If there was a group of 30 or 40 persons along the fence yelling and screaming, then it might be a little embarrassing."

A neighbor couple did not seem to take note of Wills' nude body, but a few minutes later a female voice called out, "Apparently, it doesn't bother you that I have two teen-aged girls out here."

The detectives then walked through the backyard gate and advised Wills of his constitutional rights. Wills put on his clothes, was handcuffed and taken to the police station for booking procedures.

Wills said he at one time had opposed pornography in Chicago. He added that his life took a 180-degree turn when he had an "awakening" one night.

"I was sleeping one night. And I thought, 'Who is higher than the Supreme Court? God of course,' and God made us nude when we were born. The Bible does not say nudity is bad," Wills, who says he is a religious man, added.

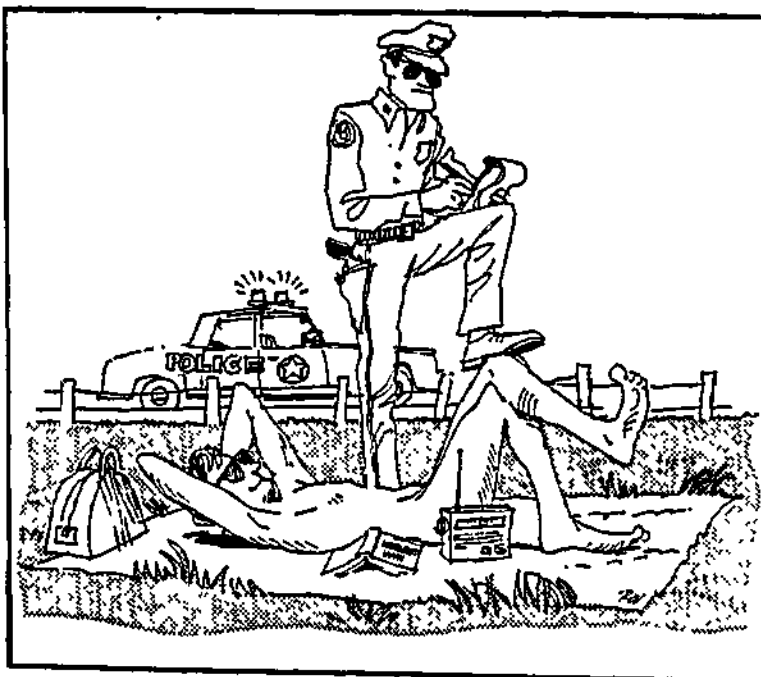

He recalled that his wife and his oldest daughter were somewhat against his intentions and that his youngest daughter "had a freer mind."

"I've gone nude sun-bathing in DuPage County. I have my place," he said. "I'm not doing it (protesting) just for myself, but for a cause."

AS COMPARED TO topless and bottomless bars, adult magazines and movies and nude bathing beaches around the world, he said nude sun bathing is nothing.

"There's nothing wrong with nudity. And there's nothing wrong with sunbathing," Wills said. "Two rights make a third right."

Mrs. Peggy Troccoli, 7097 Edgebrook Lane, a neighbor, said, "I was shocked. I was dumbfounded. I was certainly not happy with my teen-aged girls back there."

"It was offensive to me," she added.

"You notice he did it during the day when just the women are around. I'd like to see him do it with the men around."

Three students impressed with bicycle trip

Three students from Prospect High School wanted to do something different this summer. So they dug up some county road maps and prepared for a trip to Canada — on bicycles.

"We wanted to do something impressive," said Chris Prinslow of 11 N. Gibbons, Arlington Heights.

Chris and his two friends, Bill Lyon and Kevin Gray, both of Arlington Heights then mapped out their itinerary of county roads in Wisconsin and Minnesota.

"Traffic was mostly from the farms," said Chris. "A lot of people think Wisconsin is flat, but it's hills. Those county roads were fooling. We had three flat tires."

SOMETIMES THE roads they had planned to take were under construction or torn up. "We had to change the itinerary but we had some good luck," said Bill.

"People were pretty friendly and helpful," he added. "We saw other bike riders. We would see a group almost every day."

Averaging about 65 miles a day, the boys followed an easy-going schedule. "Some days we'll do 90 (miles) and on some 35," said Chris. "We wanted to enjoy ourselves."

At nights, the boys stayed with relatives who live in Wisconsin and Minnesota. "In the morning we bought sweet rolls and had peanut butter and jelly sandwiches for lunches and then we stopped at relatives' for dinners," said Chris.

In nine days, the group (minus Kevin who had gotten ill on the trip and had to board a bus back to Arlington Heights) arrived at the Canadian border.

However, the pedaling stopped there and the two got on a bus for home. "I'm already planning something for next summer," said Chris.

Mechanic shot eight times

was arrested minutes after the shooting. Associate Judge Marvin J. Peters ordered Schmidt, a Hungarian immigrant, taken to Cook County Jail on $25,000 bond early yesterday. He has been charged by Des Plaines police with attempted murder and aggravated battery.

The shooting stemmed from previous arguments between the two over the use of an automobile they shared, police said. The two worked together as auto mechanics at Laurel Motors, 280 E. Ogden Ave., in Westmont and had been living together in the Des Plaines apartment for about four months.

The incident occurred about 6:30 p.m. Police said Schmidt began shooting at his roommate immediately after Klien returned from a shopping trip carrying bags of groceries.

Police said they were alerted by a building resident who was aroused by the gunshots. Several other residents also told police they were startled by the shots.

Police, who arrived on the scene about a minute later, nabbed Schmidt as he walked onto a terrace outside the first-floor apartment.

Police said they found Klien's body lying on the floor of an adjacent apartment, after following a trail of blood from the terrace near where Klien was shot.

He had apparently staggered into the next apartment through the terrace door in search of help before he fell, while the residents had run into the hall through the front door to investigate the gunshots, police said.

An automatic pistol, used in the shooting as well as a shotgun propped against a sofa were found during a police search of Schmidt's apartment, according to reports. Police had not learned yesterday afternoon if the guns were registered.

It was also noticed during the search that some bedroom furniture had been overturned and a telephone had been ripped from the wall, according to reports. Schmidt had reportedly stayed home from work that day.

State's attorneys had difficulty questioning Schmidt Tuesday night. The suspect had been in the U.S. about three years and speaks little English. He is not a U.S. citizen.

Schmidt will be returned to Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court for a hearing Sept. 6.

Pearson says he won't pay expenses asked by village for snake search

By JEANNETTE DeWYZE

Although Buffalo Grove officials say they are continuing with plans to bill David Pearson for costs of the recent village snake hunt, the youth stated flatly that he would not pay.

The snake hunt developed Saturday afternoon when Pearson, 18, told police that Seymour, which he described as being a deadly cobra snake, escaped from his residence at 568 Maple Dr.

After three days of frantic search, however, village officials announced that they believed Seymour was a non-poisonous rat snake. Officials based this opinion on testimony from a snake expert who examined a shedded skin which police said came from the escaped snake.

Pearson was unaware of the village getting ready to bill or sue him until contacted by The Herald yesterday.

"I WOULD TAKE it to the highest court I could find," Pearson said when asked about the possibility of the village initiating civil action in the courts to collect the damages.

The decision to attempt to bill Pearson for the search costs came in the form of a resolution which was passed by a 6-0 vote of the village board Monday night.

The resolution states that the village should determine the cost of the search and present a bill to Pearson. In the event Pearson cannot or will not pay the bill, the resolution directs the village attorney to initiate the civil action.

In proposing the resolution, Trustee Thomas Mahoney said he did not think village taxpayers should be forced to pay for a search that was caused by the negligence of one resident.

Pearson said yesterday, however, that he did not feel he had been guilty of any negligence in connection with the snake.

IN DISPUTING THE charge of negligence Pearson said he informed the police that he was keeping the snakes the second day after he received them for safekeeping from Eugene Bowling, a Wheeling friend. This was about a month and a half ago, he said.

He said he invited Buffalo Grove police officer Charles Weidner in to look at the snakes, which included Seymour, two boa snakes and a water snake.

In addition, Pearson said he and Bowling asked Weidner to check on the legality of keeping the snakes. He said he offered to remove the snakes immediately if there was any law prohibiting them or if he was presented by a petition signed by 50 village residents asking for removal of the snakes.

ABOUT A WEEK later the police told Pearson that he could legally keep the snakes, Pearson said. While the police have confirmed the entire incident, police chief Harry Walsh has said that the department was mistakenly acting on "bad advice."

Pearson also said he would refuse to pay for the search costs because he disapproved of the manner in which police conducted the snake hunt.

Pearson said although he had consented to the shoot-to-kill order which police issued, he felt that the shotguns used in the snake hunt were both unnecessary and dangerous. He also said he felt police should not have started the search at the house and then moved outward, as they did, since Pearson said he thought this would tend to drive the snake away.

Although Pearson voiced criticism of the police methods in hunting Seymour, he said Monday that he was following a police recommendation to avoid further public comment on the snake itself. He said the recommendation was aimed at preventing the further spread of public panic over the snake.

THUS, HE REFUSED to comment on whether he thought Seymour was a rat snake or a cobra snake.

He did say, however, that he planned to go with a police officer to a zoo where he could identify a snake which looked like Seymour.

Pearson described the snake as being black, red, and gold.

"I also knew that the snake had a hood, because it tried to bite me a few times," he said.

Village Attorney Richard Raysa yesterday said when he was first consulted about the potential suit against Pearson he had expressed the opinion that the search costs could be recovered. However, Raysa said he was unaware that the police had told the youth the snakes were not illegal.

If further legal research reveals that a suit would be unfeasible, Raysa said he would recommend that the village not prosecute Pearson.

Faced with a disorderly conduct charge and a possible court battle, Pearson said yesterday that his primary concern was still the recovery of the snake.

"I'm just worried about the snake biting someone," he said.

But these little piggies aren't going to market

by JULIA BAUER

Prize-winning cattle, hogs, and lambs will stay on the hoof until the meat situation gets brighter.

At Arlington Park's Future of America Fair, the livestock owners chose to take their animals home instead of selling them at today's market prices.

The livestock auction barn was deserted Tuesday. Instead of the folksy clamor of farmers and their livestock, the animals they raise, there was only a silent wind blowing over the straw-covered arena and empty bleachers at the Future of America sale.

Ray Miltz, director of the livestock show, wistfully shook his head and blamed the situation on the meat price ceiling. Some 100 exhibitors brought their steers, hogs and lambs to be poked and scrutinized by judges from universities around the country.

These farmers and breeders came from Indiana, Iowa and Illinois. One reason they came was for the judging. But another big reason was the hope of selling their animals for a better price than they could get in the regular marketplace.

IT SEEMS THAT the farmers came hoping to find a more receptive market, one with buyers willing to pay out more for this livestock than they would give for other animals.

When it became clear that the auction probably wouldn't bring the farmers any higher price, the livestock officials called a meeting with the exhibitors and decided to call off the auction.

Even if the sale had happened, Miltz had another major problem. He wasn't able to line up slaughterers to process the animals for people who bought one or two animals.

Giddens appoints new high school police counselor

Prospect High School students will have a new police counselor this year.

After seven years as high school youth officer, Patrolman Richard Yost has been assigned to regular police work. His replacement will be Patrolman Steven Leonard.

Police Chief Bert Giddens made the switch last week because he said he wanted Yost "back on the street."

"I thought this was long enough," Giddens said, referring to Yost's seven years of service as counselor.

Leonard, who joined the department last year, has a degree in psychology and has done some practice teaching, according to Giddens. Yost, a 19-year veteran, is the second vice president of the local Combined Counties Police Association chapter, which was formed last year.

Sunbather bares his, er, soul . . .

Jim Willis bared his soul yesterday afternoon, but his birthday suit was a little too much for Hanover Park police.

Police "pinched" Willis, 50, on charges of disorderly conduct and public indecency after they found him sunning his bare backside in his backyard at 7102 Meadowbrook Dr., Hanover Park.

Two plainclothes detectives were responding to a complaint filed about 2 p.m. at the police station by a citizen.

Willis staged the browning-in-the-buff incident with help from his lawyer, William Stukas. Willis hopes to provide a test case on the question of the legality of nude sunbathing.

The self-proclaimed nude sun bather, who was released on $1,000 bond, is scheduled to appear at 9:30 a.m. Sept. 20 in the Schaumburg branch of the Circuit Court.

ARRESTING OFFICERS said they had been aware of "Mr. Willis' intentions," but added that they did not know the incident would take place until the complaint came to the station. Willis said part of the plans included a specially picked complainant who would walk by and report it to the police.

"I'm doing it primarily from a religious motivation, you might say," Willis said.

"I'm not afraid of getting arrested. Jesus Christ was arrested, and he was right," he added.

Willis, a marketing statistician for a housewares firm, went into his backyard about 2 p.m. The yard is about 50 by 60 feet with a chain-link fence around the perimeter. The neighbors have an unobstructed view of Willis' backyard.

Willis had spread out a white towel in the northeast corner of the yard next to the house. He sat down and talked to his wife who was whispering from a nearby window.

He waited a minute, and then gingerly slipped his pants off. He lay with only the backside exposed.

HE SAID HE WAS not really embar-

assed to take his clothes off, but added, "If there was a group of 30 or 40 persons along the fence yelling and screaming, then it might be a little embarrassing."

A neighbor couple did not seem to take note of Willis' nude body, but a few minutes later a female voice called out, "Apparently, it doesn't bother you that I have two teen-aged girls out here."

The detectives then walked through the backyard gate and advised Willis of his constitutional rights. Willis put on his clothes, was handcuffed and taken to the police station for booking procedures.

Willis said he at one time had opposed pornography in Chicago. He added that his life took a 180-degree turn when he had an "awakening" one night.

"I was sleeping one night. And I thought, 'Who is higher than the Supreme Court? God of course,' and God made us nude when we were born. The Bible does not say nudity is bad," Willis, who says he is a religious man, added.

He recalled that his wife and his oldest daughter were somewhat against his intentions and that his youngest daughter "had a freer mind."

"I've gone nude sun-bathing in DuPage County. I have my place," he said. "I'm not doing it (protesting) just for myself, but for a cause."

AS COMPARED TO topless and bottomless bars, adult magazines and movies and nude bathing beaches around the world, he said nude sun bathing is nothing.

"There's nothing wrong with nudity. And there's nothing wrong with sunbathing," Willis said. "Two rights make a third right."

Mrs. Peggy Troccoli, 7097 Edgebrook Lane, a neighbor, said, "I was shocked. I was dumbfounded. I was certainly not happy with my teen-aged girls back there."

"It was offensive to me," she added. "You notice he did it during the day when just the women are around. I'd like to see him do it with the men around."

More heat may bring a record demand for water

More hot weather today may bring a record demand for water in Arlington Heights and low water pressure to some south side areas.

Arlington Heights wells pumped 13.7 million gallons of water Tuesday, a legal lawn sprinkling day, setting a record for the year, according to Asst. Public Works Director Bill Reinhard.

Yesterday was a nonsprinkling day and the water system was recharging, he said. But the promise of a sixth day of 90-degree weather, coupled with more legal sprinkling, could result in an even greater demand for water.

So far there has been enough water throughout the village, but far southern sections have had pressure problems due to emptied storage reservoirs, Reinhard said.

Some residents were asked to stop sprinkling temporarily Tuesday night, he said, because of low water in the Thomas Street reservoir and the Arlington Heights Road hydropillar.

Violators of Arlington Heights' sprinkling ordinance have been notified during the past several weeks that watering is permitted on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday only. The enforcement program has reduced but not eliminated illegal sprinkling, Reinhard said.

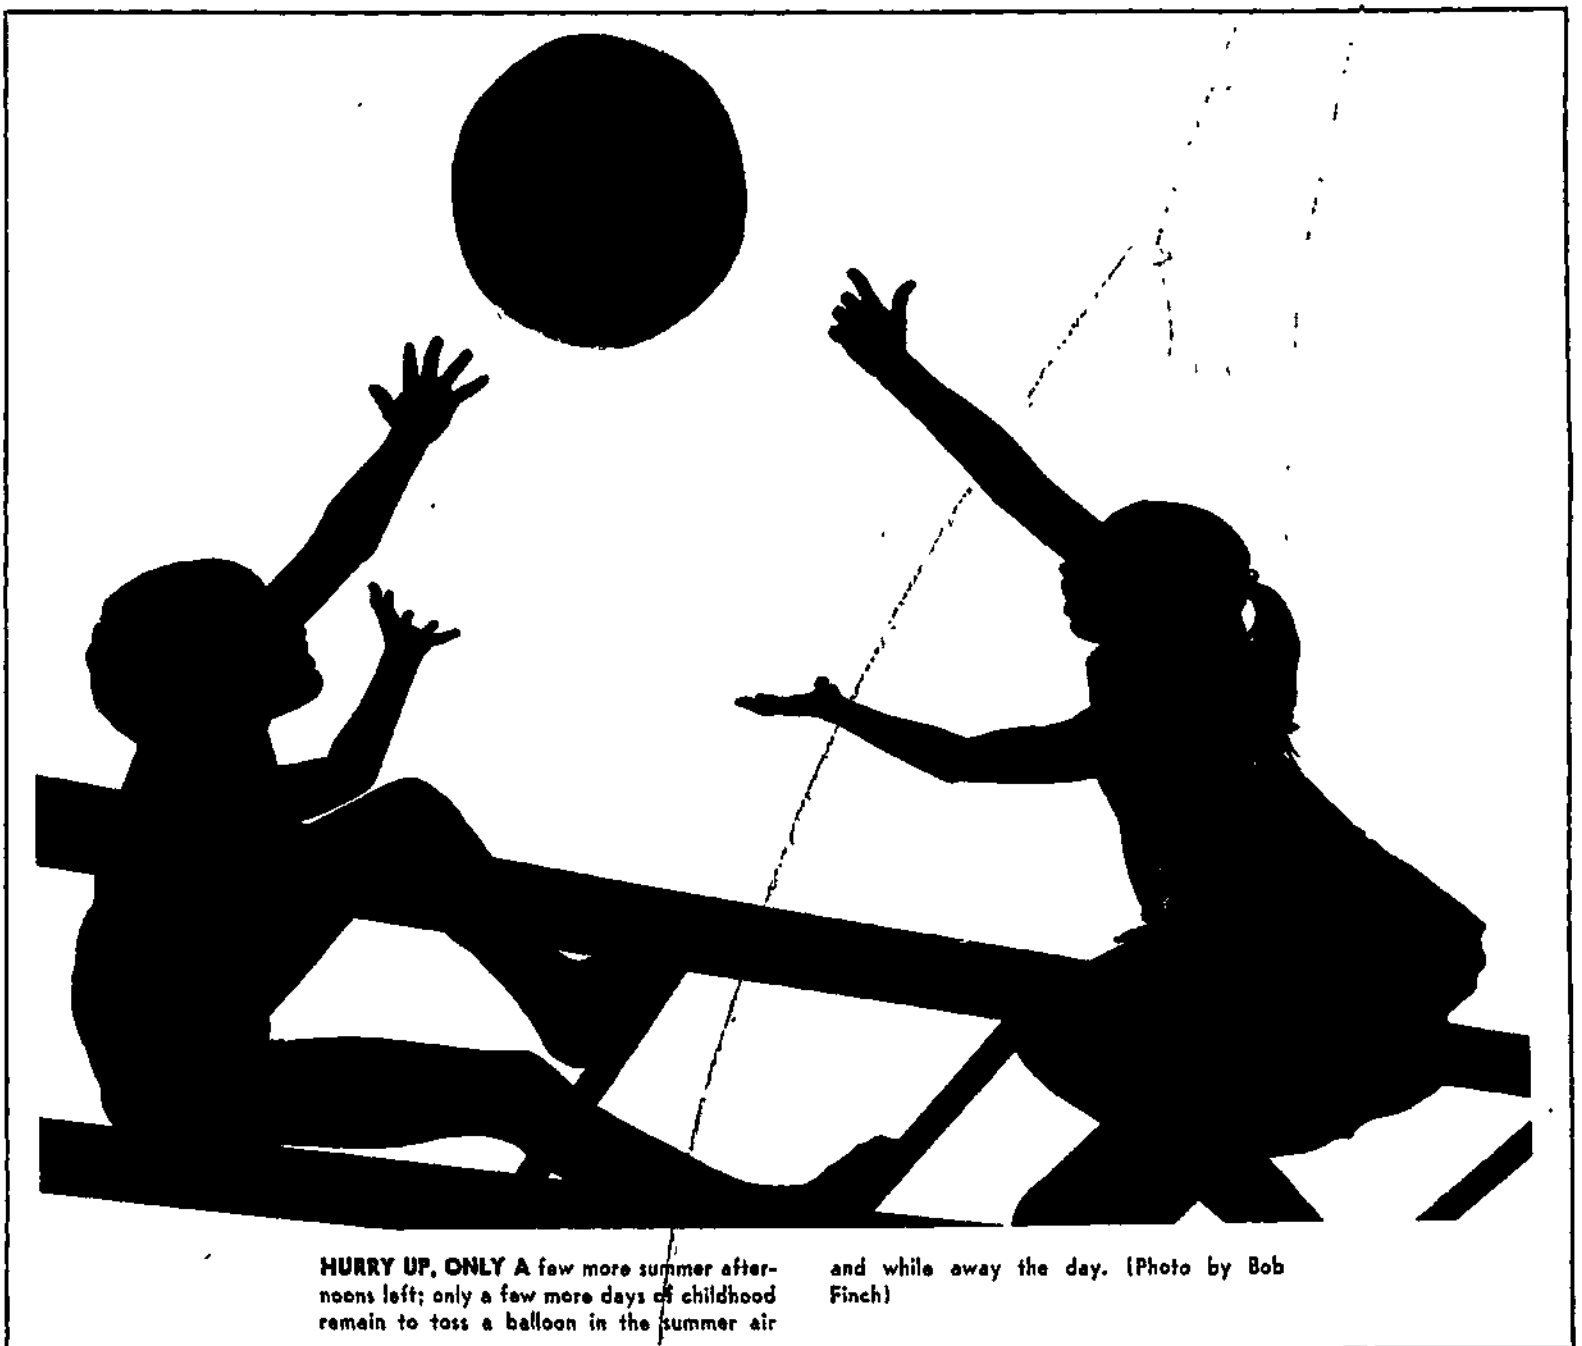

"WE'RE IN MUCH better shape than last year with the new six million gallon reservoir at the landfill (at the northern tip of the village).

"Our problem is still on the far south side where we have trouble pumping water fast enough when the reservoir goes dry."

An additional six-million-gallon reservoir has been recommended for the south side of the village. The village may share the cost of the reservoir with the Chicago-O'Hare International Trade Center, which is also going to need a water storage facility as a fire safety measure.

Reinhard said that power cuts by Commonwealth Edison during the heat wave do not adversely affect the pumping operation at village wells.

Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said late yesterday that no sprinkling bans were being contemplated for today.

Three blood donor days have been scheduled during September as part of Arlington Heights' guaranteed blood replacement program.

The first will be from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., Sept. 16, at Cross and Crown Lutheran Church, 1122 W. Rand Rd.

The second will be from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m., Sept. 21, at South Junior High School, 300 W. South St.

The third will be from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m., Sept. 22, at St. Edna Catholic Church, 2325 N. Arlington Heights Rd.

Appointments for any of the blood donor sessions may be made by calling the village health department at 253-2340.

More than 1,700 pints of blood have been donated to the guaranteed blood replacement program so far this year. The village has a quota of 2,768 pints to meet by February in order to remain in good standing with the North Suburban Blood Bank.

The program guarantees every village resident an unlimited supply of free blood in exchange for blood donations from 4 per cent of the population.

Omni-House solves runaways' dilemma

by JILL BETTNER

The 15-year-old kid is nervous. He slouches further down in the chair and recrosses his long, bluejeaned legs. Brushing his hair out of his eyes with a shaking hand, he blurts out his story.

"Look man, I didn't do nothing. I mean that teacher just doesn't like me, so she kicked me out. Hey, you know my old man wouldn't understand that, so I had to split — I had to."

It's a familiar alibi, one Harry Wells, Omni-House counselor, has heard from lots of other runaways. Lots of other kids like this youth who doesn't really understand why they leave home, why life is unbearable there.

Some minor scrape a kid gets into can trigger the impulse to run, Wells said, but usually it's just a manifestation of trouble that's been brewing for a long time.

The suburban lifestyle contributes to a situation Wells said is difficult for many adolescents to handle.

A COMMUTING father who catches the 6 a.m. train to the city not to return until late evening often leaves behind a nonworking wife. Lonely, with too much time on her hands, Wells said she turns to her children for attention she can't get from her absent husband.

Without realizing it, he said, she becomes a "smother mother," quenching with well-meaning affection the natural teenage desires for freedom and independence until she literally drives her child to make a break for it.

"This is the kind of mother who very often says, 'My whole life is my child,' " Wells explained. "When a child reaches puberty, there's a normal storm of conflict inside him between wanting freedom and needing to depend on his mother. But when she puts too tight a rein on him, she forces him to look for ways to get away from her."

So, he runs. Last year, 51 kids in the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove area took off, most for one, maybe two days. They don't usually go far, friends put them up for a couple of nights and then they nearly always show up for school.

That's when they're picked up by the local police and returned to their worried parents. Often the juvenile officer handling the case will suggest counseling through Omni-House, a youth services bureau that operates out of a storefront at 516 N. Milwaukee Ave. in Wheeling.

THE COUNSELING is not just for the runaway, it's for the entire family.

"We don't isolate the child and say, hey, you're the patient here, you're the one who needs to be fixed," Wells said. "The whole family is in trouble."

After talking individually with the child and the parents, the professional psychologists, social workers and ministers at Omni-House set up the kind of counseling they think will be most beneficial.

Sometimes, it's essentially marriage

WWMM is brought to the public

The DJ: a living exhibition at fair

by MARCIA KRAMER

"It's six and a half away from eleven o'clock. Double-U-M Radio, you and Jack Stockton... Let's go back to Seventy-Two. You were around in Seventy-Two. It was only last year. Sister Rose and the Cornelli Brothers. This song was dynamite last year."

Stockton flicks a switch, grabs for a Marlboro and leans back in his chair as strains of "Too Late To Turn Back Now," a dynamite hit in '72 by Sister Rose and the Cornelli Brothers, come over the monitor.

"This is a way of getting a radio station to the public," he says, flipping his gold lighter and drawing on his cigarette. "That way the station is something more than sounds coming out of the radio in your house or car."

This week, WWMM Radio "the itty-bitty little radio station with the great big bumpersticker," Stockton calls it) is coming out of the Future of America Fair at the Arlington Park Race Track.

The "deejays" are holed up in a makeshift broadcast booth, a wooden shack plastered with WWMM stickers and album jackets, in the midst of dozens of other booths in the grandstand.

Two sides of the booth are glass, which are covered with finger and nose prints as kids press up against it to get a look at the man behind the voice.

STOCKTON, ONE of five disc jockeys from the Arlington Heights station broadcasting from the fair, acknowledges the gazes with a smile here, a wink there, and a confession the young admirers can't hear: "I'm really not an exhibitionist. I don't like to be watched."

The eeriness of being pointed and stared at wore off during his first day at the fair, though, and now the 35-year-old "deejay" doesn't seem to mind being in the WWMM fishbowl, one of the most popular attractions at the fair.

In fact, after awhile, "It's fun to be here and meet all the people."

Stockton is one of those guys who really likes his work. "If I didn't, I'd be no good at it," he says, chuckling in an aside. "Some would say I'm no good anyway."

He breaks off suddenly, clears his throat, jabs a button and lowers his voice a few notches. "It's twelve minutes past eleven o'clock." He pauses, then leans closer to the microphone, cooing: "I forgot to tell you how nice you look today..."

A Connie Francis tune takes over, and Stockton takes a few quick sips of coffee from "Teresa's love cup," a red, white and black mug containing the word "love" in several languages. It was sent in by a listener.

Most of Stockton's followers are housewives, "or homemakers as some of them like to be called," and he tries to gear his program toward them.

FOR ONE THING, he has some respect for his audience. "The average housewife is not the dummy so many people think she is, sitting around changing diapers and yakking on the telephone. She's involved in a lot of things."

Whenever possible, Stockton tries to get involved in these things too, interviewing a meat man, for example, during the recent crunch of high prices and low quantity.

He'll talk about just anything on the air, he says, except the traditional trio of taboos: sex, religion and politics, and one more taboo of his own: his family.

"Nine times out of 10 the listeners could care less about my wife or my kids. Their kids say things just as funny as what my kids say."

Stockton fumbles with his headset (the left ear bringing him the program, the right ear, his music director back at the studio), turns a red dial on the console and glances at the daily program log propped up on a turntable. "Stereo radio ninety-two point seven, you need some good furniture?"

Off the air, Stockton spends his time (what else?) listening to the radio, partly for pleasure, partly to keep up with the business. Sometimes he tunes in AM stations, though he considers them "too commercial, too hyped up, too kiddie"; usually he prefers FM, though it often is nothing more than "elevator background" or the Muzak common in doc-

THE WWMM outlook is to "try to fill a void," to bridge the gap between the stations which play the Top Forty and those which specialize in Oldies but Goodies.

The substation at the fair is the first venture outside the studio or the fledgling radio station, and the disc jockeys are taking full advantage of it — interviewing celebrity entertainers at the fair, signing up fairgoers for door prize and bumper sticker drawings and in the process attracting (they hope) more listeners.

"That's quite a flight plan," offers one middle-aged man, peering into the mini-studio from the open doorway. "Yes," Stockton agrees, amidst the abundance of dials and wires, "It is like flying a plane, isn't it?"

Keeper says he won't pay cost for big snake hunt

By JEANNETTE DeWYZE

Although Buffalo Grove officials say they are continuing with plans to bill David Pearson for costs of the recent village snake hunt, the youth stated flatly that he would not pay.

The snake hunt developed Saturday afternoon when Pearson, 18, told police that Seymour, which he described as being a deadly cobra snake, escaped from his residence at 568 Maple Dr.

After three days of frantic search, however, village officials announced that they believed Seymour was a non-poisonous rat snake. Officials based this opinion on testimony from a snake expert who examined a shedded skin which police said came from the escaped snake.

Pearson was unaware of the village getting ready to bill or sue him until contacted by The Herald yesterday.

"I WOULD TAKE it to the highest court I could find," Pearson said when asked about the possibility of the village initiating civil action in the courts to collect the damages.

The decision to attempt to bill Pearson for the search costs came in the form of a resolution which was passed by a 6-0 vote of the village board Monday night.

The resolution states that the village should determine the cost of the search and present a bill to Pearson. In the event Pearson cannot or will not pay the bill, the resolution directs the village attorney to initiate the civil action.

In proposing the resolution, Trustee Thomas Mahoney said he did not think village taxpayers should be forced to pay for a search that was caused by the negligence of one resident.

Pearson said yesterday, however, that he did not feel he had been guilty of any negligence in connection with the snake.

IN DISPUTING THE charge of negligence Pearson said he informed the police that he was keeping the snakes the second day after he received them for safekeeping from Eugene Bowling, a Wheeling friend. This was about a month and a half ago, he said.

He said he invited Buffalo Grove police officer Charles Weidner in to look at the snakes, which included Seymour, two boa snakes and a water snake.

In addition, Pearson said he and Bowling asked Weidner to check on the legality of keeping the snakes. He said he offered to remove the snakes immediately if there was any law prohibiting them or if he was presented by a petition signed by 50 village residents asking for removal of the snakes.

ABOUT A WEEK later the police told Pearson that he could legally keep the snakes, Pearson said. While the police have confirmed the entire incident, police chief Harry Walsh has said that the department was mistakenly acting on "bad advice."

Pearson also said he would refuse to pay for the search costs because he disapproved of the manner in which police conducted the snake hunt.

Pearson said although he had consented to the shoot-to-kill order which police issued, he felt that the shotguns used in the snake hunt were both unnecessary and dangerous. He also said he felt police should not have started the search at the house and then moved outward, as they did, since Pearson said he thought this would tend to drive the snake away.

Although Pearson voiced criticism of the police methods in hunting Seymour, he said Monday that he was following a police recommendation to avoid further public comment on the snake itself. He said the recommendation was aimed at preventing the further spread of public panic over the snake.

THUS, HE REFUSED to comment on whether he thought Seymour was a rat snake or a cobra snake.

He did say, however, that he planned to go with a police officer to a zoo where he could identify a snake which looked like Seymour.

Pearson described the snake as being black, red, and gold. "I also knew that the snake had a hood, because it tried to bite me a few times," he said.

Village Attorney Richard Raysa yesterday said when he was first consulted about the potential suit against Pearson he had expressed the opinion that the search costs could be recovered. However, Raysa said he was unaware that the police had told the youth the snakes were not illegal.

Omni-House solves runaways' problems counseling, to help the parents recognize and work out the problems between them that are affecting the child.

The child is not allowed, however, to blame his behavior on his parents' difficulties. He is encouraged to join Omni-House teen groups, not therapy groups, but kids involved in a variety of projects and activities. As part of the group, the child must learn to accept the responsibility for his acts and function as a contributing member.

THE FIGURES are not an entirely accurate measure of the success of the Omni-House approach, but out of the 51 local teenagers who left home last year, only four felt as though they had to get away again.

"We've found that getting to the parents seems to be the answer — approaching the fact that a kid runs away as a family problem," Wells said. "As long as the relationship between the parents improves and so increases their effectiveness as parents, the behavior of the child almost always improves. Unfortunately, the converse is also true."

More reading, 'gifted' programs

The curriculum in School Dist. 21 this fall will be expanded to include more extensive programs for gifted children and bilingual students.

Dist. 21 serves Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and portions of Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect.

Special instruction for gifted and bilingual students has been available on a limited basis in the district, but this year both programs will be more intensive.

The term "gifted" has traditionally applied to those children who exhibit intellectual development beyond their years. According to Asst. Supt. Marjorie Beu, the philosophy behind the Dist. 21 program is much broader.

"EVERY YOUNGSTER has the potential to be gifted in some area," she said. "We have to identify that area and then help him develop it by challenging him."

A new gifted program coordinator, Larry Chase, has been hired by the district to work with teachers in devising activities to stimulate children who express a special interest in a particular area.

Chase will spend some time each week in each of the schools in the district.

As part of the gifted children program, Miss Beu said Chase may help teachers develop special classes for children interested in literature, art, music and science.

"We plan to offer gifted activities in almost every area on every grade level," she said. Miss Beu added that a child who is particularly proficient in one area may be called upon to help others interested in that subject.

"NO MATTER where a child is on the achievement ladder, someday he'll have to function with all people," Miss Beu said. "I feel we haven't given the kids on the high end of the ladder enough help."

Chase will conduct a special week-long workshop this week for teachers to acquaint them with some of the needs of gifted children and how to spot and encourage special interests.

The district recently received $97,600 to establish a district-wide program of bilingual instruction. Currently, the only bilingual students in Dist. 21 speak Spanish in addition to English.

The program, funded by the Illinois Office of the Superintendent of Instruction, is designed to teach bilingual students to function in both Spanish and English.

BEGINNING IN September, there will be two full-time bilingual teachers at Hawthorne School, one at Holmes Junior High School and two itinerant teachers who will travel regularly to other schools in the district to tutor the approximately 178 Spanish-speaking students currently enrolled.

One bilingual instructor will handle students at Alcott, Sandburg and Field schools and the other teacher will work with students at Twain and Whitman schools.

Miss Beu said part of the bilingual program will include instruction in the history and the culture of Spanish-speaking peoples.

"We plan to integrate culture as part of the social studies instruction to also expose the other children to Spanish culture."

Until now, bilingual instruction for Spanish-speaking students has been offered only at Hawthorne School in Wheeling.

Parks to spend $71,000 to fix field house

The park district in Arlington Heights will spend $71,000 on renovating the Pioneer Park field house damaged by fire in mid-June.

The fire, believed to have been started by a short circuit in a fan, resulted in park programs being held at other park facilities.

Complete remodeling is expected to be completed within six weeks, said Thomas Thornton, director of parks and recreation.

The park board also recently approved for an aerial topography on the 138-acre Nike base site. The aerial mappings will be used for preparing development plans for a golf course on the 12½ acres that was conveyed to the park district by the federal government earlier this month.

The mapping project will cost $1,575 and will be completed within the next 30 days.

In other matters, the park district will lease additional facilities at Recreation Park for the children who require special education under the North Suburban Special Education Organization. Pre-school park programs normally scheduled at Recreation Park will be held at Windsor School this year.

Mechanic shot eight times

by JOHN MAES

A Des Plaines man was in satisfactory condition yesterday at Holy Family Hospital after being shot eight times at close range by his roommate Tuesday night, according to police.

Peter Klien, 29, of 910 Beau Dr., was in intensive care yesterday afternoon, a hospital spokesman said. He had been shot in the jaw, chest and hand.

Klien's roommate, Antal Schmidt, 29, was arrested minutes after the shooting. Associate Judge Marvin J. Peters ordered Schmidt, a Hungarian immigrant, taken to Cook County Jail on $25,000 bond early yesterday. He has been charged by Des Plaines police with attempted murder and aggravated battery.

The shooting stemmed from previous arguments between the two over the use of an automobile they shared, police said. The two worked together as auto mechanics at Laurel Motors, 280 E. Ogden Ave., in Westmont and had been living together in the Des Plaines apartment for about four months.

The incident occurred about 6:30 p.m. Police said Schmidt began shooting at his roommate immediately after Klien returned from a shopping trip carrying bags of groceries.

Police said they were alerted by a building resident who was aroused by the gunshots. Several other residents also told police they were startled by the shots.

Police, who arrived on the scene about a minute later, nabbed Schmidt as he walked onto a terrace outside the first-floor apartment.

Police said they found Klien's body lying on the floor of an adjacent apartment, after following a trail of blood from the terrace near where Klien was shot.

He had apparently staggered into the next apartment through the terrace door in search of help before he fell, while the residents had run into the hall through the front door to investigate the gunshots, police said.

An automatic pistol, used in the shooting as well as a shotgun propped against a sofa were found during a police search of Schmidt's apartment, according to reports. Police had not learned yesterday afternoon if the guns were registered.

It was also noticed during the search that some bedroom furniture had been overturned and a telephone had been ripped from the wall, according to reports. Schmidt had reportedly stayed home from work that day.

State's attorneys had difficulty questioning Schmidt Tuesday night. The suspect had been in the U.S. about three years and speaks little English. He is not a U.S. citizen.

Schmidt will be returned to Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court for a hearing Sept. 6.
